Hoover Is Taking Some Promises Out Of Speech—Rogers

(Special To The News)

BOHEMIAN GROVE, Cal., Aug. 4.—Just blew up from Los Angeles with a head wind all the way. This is that famous Bohemian Grove Club you have heard so much of.

It's wonderful in these great redwood trees.

I thought the place was very exclusive but I run onto Harrison Fisher, Jimmy Swinnerton and even George McManus, Jiggs and Maggie.

And Hoover belongs. He is busy shortening his acceptance speech. He is not going to promise as much as he first thought he would.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

PA NEWC OBSERVES

Pa Newc was out to watch the grangers picnicking at the farm of Audley Boak near the Harlansburg road on Friday. There were about 2500 or 3000 people there and there were hundreds of cars. It was just like a county fair excepting that there were no ballyhooers there.

There was but one concessionaire on the whole plot for the picnickers. As the sun beat down hotter and hotter every minute there was a great demand for pop and ice cream and there was enough business for ten stands.

Country people have "it" when it comes to mixing in with strangers and having a good time. There were people there from four different counties and if you didn't know somebody all you had to do was step up and get acquainted or it was your own fault.

J. Wylie Brewster was stepping over the grounds yesterday at the picnic. It seemed to Pa that he was keeping his eye out for any unlicensed dogs that came for the ox bones. For those who don't know it, Mr. Brewster is the canine annexer of this district and if your dog hasn't got a license, you'll soon have the pleasure of meeting him. Pa has known him all his life and he's never asked to see my license once!

A south side young man who is going to school in Pittsburgh missed his morning train at Gardner avenue for the junction the other morning. He hopped on a passing auto and rode to the seventh ward and then ran the entire distance down to the junction. He got there just on time and the train was 40 minutes late.

"Is the Snark a Boojum?" Pa Newc was recently asked by one young man who admits that he has been disappointed in love (the girl gave him the air). Although Pa does not often answer Advice to the Love Lorn questions, he must admit that in nine cases out of ten the Snark is a Boojum. Which, stripped of its metaphor, means that after one gets something he wants, he finds out that, after all, it was not worth wanting.

So that the terrace of the Scottish Rite cathedral will not be spoiled by heavy rains, a retaining wall has been built at the top of the terrace, which will throw the water down the drive way. That shows an admirable amount of foresight by the manager and directors of the institution.

During summer months, libraries are usually deserted. Pa Newc has been surprised at the reading room attendance at the New Castle public library this summer. Every time one enters the door, the reading room seems comfortably filled. Which proves something, but Pa Newc is almost afraid to say what it does prove.

Old John gathers rags. A few days ago Old John had a mishap. He was going up the Youngstown hill, pushing his cart. In front, three Little Johns were pulling the cart by a long rope. The rope broke. Old John almost was run down. The cart smashed. Now Old John has added new equipment. He has a horse and wagon. The sage of the police department predicts that Old John will be a success, because he has business acumen, but most of all, because he has one of the most melodious voices in New Castle.

In observing queer things, Pa Newc was privileged to see a most queer bus this morning. It will be used between New York and Atlantic City and is

Blistering Heat Is Holding East; Hope For Relief

Six Deaths Are Reported In New York City; Five In New England

MANY PROSTRATIONS IN LARGE CITIES

Hottest August 3 In 46 Years Is Recorded In New York Friday

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 4. — Blistering heat took a toll of six lives in the last twenty-four hours and no hope of immediate relief is seen in the weather bureau's official forecast for today which foresees continued warm this afternoon and tonight. It adds there is a possibility of showers tomorrow.

Look For Showers

Philadelphia, Aug. 4.—Thundershowers late today may break the heat wave which thus far has brought death to one person, prostration to another and is sweeping discomfort to thousands of urban dwellers in this section.

The high mercury mark of the present humid wave was reached at 3 p. m. yesterday when the high mark of 93 for the year was equalled.

An unidentified man collapsed last night and died shortly after being admitted to a hospital.

Five Dead In Boston

Boston, Aug. 4.—New England's toll in the hot wave today stood five dead and scores prostrated.

A series of violent thundershowers brought the mercury down from the 95 mark, but the accompanying lightning did much damage in the greater Boston area, bolts striking several buildings. Several persons had narrow escapes from death.

Thfee children trying to escape from the heat were drowned in New England waters.

Governor Smith Prepares Speech

Democratic Candidate Is At Work On Speech Of Acceptance For August 22

PLANS CONFERENCES IN NEXT FEW DAYS

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Satisfied that he is making rapid strides in his drive to capture the farm vote of the middle west, Governor Al Smith will return to Albany tomorrow to begin work on the final draft of his acceptance speech. He expects to complete the address he will deliver on August 22, in formally accepting the presidential nomination, in about ten days and then he may take a brief vacation in the Adirondacks.

Jubilant because George N. Peek of Moline, Ill., who claims to be the spokesman for a million farmers in the corn belt, has announced he will support his candidacy, Governor Smith is quietly laying plans to win the support of other farm leaders.

Within the next ten days the governor expects to have several conferences at the executive mansion at Albany with farm leaders. These meetings are to be arranged by Peek who has signified his intention of

LEADERS OF GRANGES STRONG FOR HOOVER

Both National And State Grange Heads Enthusiastically Boost Hoover

State Grange Master Declares Constitution At Stake In Coming Election

"Hoover is for the farmers!"

This was the statement of L. J. Taber, national grange master, to The News reporter yesterday at the picnic grounnds prior to his address to the grangers. Likewise did Secretary C. G. Jordan and E. B. Dorsett, state grange master express themselves.

Master Taber's statement was the result of a conference with Mr. Hoover some time ago when he presented to the Republican nominee the grange program for farm relief. Mr. Taber would not be quoted on what Mr. Hoover's reply was, but is heartily in favor of Hoover's election to the presidency.

Big Majority For Hoover

He said, "Hoover will be elected by a big majority. When the time comes, the people will go to the polls and 15 out of 20 will vote for Mr. Hoover." In the interview with the reporter, he stated further that he had witnessed other elections of a similar nature, but no matter what the trivial and outward attitude of the public is they will vote according to the dictates of their own conscience

State Secretary of Agriculture Charles G. Jordan said, "Hoover will win and he should win—most emphatically so! Hoover is a friend of the farmer," stated Secretary Jordan in his further statements," he will give them more farm relief than anyone I know."

E. B. Dorsett, state grange master, is for Hoover also. He believes that the constitution is at stake in the coming election and no matter what other prejudices are, the constitution must be preserved above all else.

Mechanic Denies Slaying Of Girl In California

Russell Beitzel, Formerly Of Philadelphia Faces Murder Charge On Coast

ADMITS ARGUMENT WITH DEAD GIRL

Officials To Subject Accused Man To Severe Examination.

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 4.—Facing a charge of first degree murder, Russell S. Beitzel, former aviation mechanic, today continued to maintain his innocence of the slaying of Barbara Morrow, whose nude body was found in a North Hollywood ravine.

Authorities investigating the mystery were prepared to go into the city jail cell where Beitzel is being held and subject the prisoner to another severe examination.

Beitzel's account, given to police during a prolonged questioning, was the basis upon which the murder complaint was formally lodged against him.

According to the former mechanic's story, he had met the girl in Philadelphia while she was a waitress and he an employe of a department store. They decided to journey to Los Angeles together, Beitzel said, and arriving here lived as man and wife.

Family Abandoned

In leaving Philadelphia Beitzel is said to have informed police, he abandoned a wife and two children.

The accused man, according to the officials, admitted having gone to the vicinity where Miss Morrow's nude body was discovered. One day he is said to have told questioners, he borrowed a revolver and drove to the scene, where he engaged in target practice.

The next day, according to his purported account, he drove to the North Hollywood spot again, this time accompanied by Miss Morrow. When they reached the vicinity of the canyon the couple engaged in an argument, Beitzel narrated, according to police, and the girl left the automobile and walked away. Beitzel said that he drove off and that he never saw Miss Morrow after that.

Wanted for Embezzlement

When he returned from this motor ride the former mechanic told neighbors that his "wife" had departed on an eastern trip, it is alleged by police.

Evidence of her violent death was seen in a bullet hole in the girl's head, according to officials who examined the body.

Beitzel is wanted in Philadelphia on a charge of embezzlement, it was disclosed by a telegram received by local authorities from Charles Beckman, captain of police at Philadelphia.

The prisoner told officials that he was formerly in the employ of the government as an air mechanic and that he had received a neck frac-

GRANGE LEADERS MAKE ADDRESSES

Ox Roast Big Success—Leaders Urge Farmers To Vote This Fall

Fair weather throughout the day permitted some 2,500 grangers from Mercer, Lawrence, Butler, Beaver and other counties to enjoy their Inter-County grange picnic at the farm of J. Audley Boak, near Princeton, on Friday.

Early in the morning, the cars began to drive in minature parades of ten and twenty at a time and before noontime came the huge field that was used as a parking space was nearly filled to capacity with the 500 or more cars that had brought grangers far and near to their destination.

The entire day was one of festivity and there was not one single moment that something was not doing or happening. Either the band was playing, or the ox was stewing in the specially built brick roasting house or the horseshoe games were at a peak.

The entire forenoon was spent in visiting and getting acquainted among the many grangers from different localities and by noon everybody knew each other and all was in readiness for the great heaps of food that were spread on the tables by the women.

Huge Ox Roast Served

About the time all were fed, the huge ox that was roasted was done, and there was not another speck of meat to be had. Every one in the grounds had ox meat and then more ox meat. An order was sent to the city and another half an ox was roasted in the afternoon for the evening meal.

The program of speakers was one to catch the eye and hold the attention of young and old alike. On the speaking program were the Hon. Charles G. Jordan, secretary of the department of agriculture in Pennsy-

Hoover Completes Work On Speech

Will Be Delivered Next Saturday Afternoon At Stanford Stadium

CANDIDATE SPENDS MORNING QUIETLY

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 4.—A new form of campaign contribution will be brought to light through the use of radio to broadcast the speech of Herbert Hoover accepting the Republican presidential nomination, it was learned today.

Local Republican organizations in various sections of the country will be asked by national leaders to pay the cost of hooking up their local radio stations to the national broadcasting system, employed to broadcast Hoover's speech across the country on August 11. A tremendous hook-up of stations, probably the greatest in history, will send the speech out into the ether, but hundreds of smaller stations will be left out of the chain unless local organizations foot the bills.

This form of contribution will be similar to the action of political clubs in paying the cost of newspaper space to advertise their favorite candidates. The adaptation of this practice, however, will put something new into American politics.

Stadium Seats 85,000.

Steamer Reports Sighting Plane In Mid-Atlantic

Unless Delayed Polish Fliers Should Reach Coast This Afternoon

PLAN RECEPTION AT NEW YORK CITY

Plane Does Not Carry Wireless—Dense Fogs Along American Coast

(International News Service)

Unless held up by bad weather or mechanical trouble, the Polish flyers Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala, were believed to be nearing the American coast this morning. The men had been on their way over 33 hours and had been reported over the mid-Atlantic flying strongly.

The Norwegian steamship Aztec reported at 2:40 a. m. Greenwich mean time, that it had sighted a white biplane in 44.22 north and 24.01 west. The plane was flying westward at high speed, but its exact destination could not be determined. It was about 250 miles north of the Azores and it could not be told whether it was headed for Bermuda, New York or the Newfoundland coast.

The plane had hopped off at Le Bourget field, near Paris at 5:59 o'clock yesterday morning (12:49 New York Daylight Saving Time), and had been in continuous flight up to the time it was sighted by the Aztec.

When the flyers left Le Bourget Field they said they might stop at the Azores to refuel or, failing in that, they probably would land in Bermuda for the same purpose. They said they hoped, in any event to arrive in New York in 40 hours.

The 40 hours would be up at 4:49 o'clock this afternoon, New York Daylight Saving Time.

The plane did not carry any wireless.

The Poles took with them 1,200 gallons of gasoline, estimated to be enough to carry them 3,600 miles or keep them aloft about 55 hours.

Sighted By Ship.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The Polish trans-Atlantic flyers—Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala—were still in flight towards the American coast and had completed nearly one half the distance between Europe and the American continent, early today, according to a wireless message received from the Steamship Aztec. The Aztec wirelessed the Evening News that the plane had been sighted in the position of 44.22 North and 24.08 West.

The Aztec sighted the plane at 2:40 Greenwich Mean Time this morning, or 9:40 p. m. Friday, Eastern Standard Time. If the airmen succeeded in maintaining the same rate of speed they had been making they should be sighted off the American coast some time during the morning. The Aztec reported the plane was flying high and apparently all was well.

The message from the Aztec—a Norwegian steamer—was picked up by the wireless station at Valentia, on the west coast of Ireland.

The position given by the steamship was approximately 250 miles

The sun shines bright in my old Kentucky Home, and its shining every other place I wot, for up here in Pennsylvania it is what the summer wants, and I reckon it can now be classed as hot. Everywhere I look for shelter it is sweltering with heat, and the streets throw back the glare of Mister Sun. It is torrid, it is florid it is melting folks away, and its going up at noon 'twas ninet-one. Oh the weather is a beaner, but I will not say a word, when I think of all the rainy days we had, so although its getting warmer keep a smile upon your map, for remember folks, this weather isn't bad.

Real Thrillers Are On Program

Many Big Features Being Arranged For Scottish Rite Picnic On Wednesday

EXPECT THOUSANDS WILL ATTEND EVENT

All roads will lead to Cascade park next Wednesday for the Scottish Rite picnic, while the air will be buzzing with airplanes. D. Roy Bradford, manager of the New Castle airport, will fly to the picnic. He will have as his guest Prof. R J. Merritt, chief pilot of the Ryan Aeronautical company of San Diego, Cal. During the day a thrilling dive will be made from the plane while it is soaring in the sky. This will prove one of the many features of the big outing and it is one that will cause the hundreds of picnickers to hold their breath as the dive is to be made into Cascade lake. Nothing like it has ever been attempted here and it should prove a thriller in the true sense of the word.

But this is only one of the many features of the day. Cascade park will be alive with events all day long. In fact there will be so many that they will crowd each other. It will be bigger and better than the best Barnum ever attempted. W. A. Taylor is looking after this feature and when it comes to pulling them early and often Bill has few equals and no superiors.

Then there will be athletic events galore. Bill Klee and George Bechtol and their committee are looking after these and a program has been arranged that will make any other field meet seem tame in comparison. There will be events for the girls, and boys, as well as a few for their fathers and mothers. But really one will have to see the contests and stunts arranged for to appreciate them and every boy and girl attending the picnic will indeed be happy to know that their dads are members of this organization.

Carl Shaner, manager of Cascade park, has turned the pleasure resort over to the Scottish Rite members and they are taking advantage of the fact. Besides the regular attractions already at the park many new ones will be added. Tents will go up all over the grounds the morning of the outing. The service division will have a big tent. So will the Yellow Dogs, the Legion of Honor and other organizations. Then Stan Treser will have one of his own. It will contain many of the nine day wonders of the world. Stan is not telling what is to take place under the canvas he will have spread, but it is dollars to brass washers that no one will want to miss this part of the program.

Demands Service When He Desires To Be Arrested

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 4.—"I want to be arrested," said a voice over the wire to the police station last night. "I'll be waiting at the corner of Main and Gilbert streets."

Such was the message and before the police arrived, he had called three times and wanted to know what was wrong with the service. "When I ask for service, I'm going to have it," he asserted.

The caller proved to be Forest Wills of this city. He is held in jail and will appear before the municipal court on a charge of drunkenness.

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT

PENN—Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob," with Richard Arlen. It's a Paramount picture. Also a Paramount news reel, comedy and orchestra.

NIXON—"A Woman Against the World," with an all-star cast, also Imperial comedy attraction, "Her Mother's Back," and latest Fox News Reel.

REGENT—"The Vanishing Pioneer" starring Jack Holt, William Powell, and Fred Kohler. Also comedy, and International News Reel, and other features.

DOME—Rin Tin Tin, the wonder dog, in "Where the North Begins," Extra special, "Dangerous Adventures,"; also "Perils of the Jungle", comedy and fables.

SCOTTISH RITE AUDITORIUM—"The Hunchback of Notre Dame," a great picture; also added feature, "A Bit of Diversity" from the Brady's School of Dancing, a stage attraction. Cartoons, comedy and news reel.

CAPITOL—Roberson-Smith Players presenting "Square Crooks" a comedy play.

Reports concerning the heighth of dahlias are coming into the office of The News quite frequently now, since Mrs. Frank Campbell of Bell avenue telephoned us and stated that she had one of unusual heighth in her garden, just exactly six feet, 10 inches tall A report reaching our office this morning informs us that Mrs. Joseph Evans, of Pulaski, has a specimen that towers somewhat higher than the recent one reported. Mrs. Evans' flower is seven feet, two inches tall.

These window corners that have mirrors in are misleading. There is one at the corner of Mercer and Washington and every time Pa Newc comes down street in a hurry he sees his own reflection and thinks he's going to run into someone coming around the corner.

To drift back to the grangers picnic yesterday, whoever says that the city has all the good looking girls is slightly off in their feminine agriculture. Out at the picnic yesterday, there were slews of good looking girls and you had to search for one that wasn't.

Another girl in town must be anticipating a wedding. Another office girl we should say. She is a cashier and every time there is a spare minute between sheckels she is working at fancy work or embroidering.

Before leaving here, Governor Fisher expressed the opinion that the Republican presidential candidate will take the state of Pennsylvania with a landslide in the coming election. He said he expected the state to poll the greatest vote ever given a presidential candidate in the state.

Dr. Work said he had no statement for publication. Upon sighting Gov. Fisher here, the Republican leader turned his attention to his boyhood friend and close associate. Politics seemed to take a "back seat" in the conversation between the Governor and Dr. Work.

Immediately after the arrival of the special train carrying Gov. Fisher, the two leaders retired to the dining room of the train. Governor Fisher came here late yesterday from his home in Indiana where he made a brief visit before his journey to the coast.

having advanced transatlantic flying another step by proving the worth of the all-metal seaplane and wireless under the most hazardous conditions.

It is pointed out that a land plane of ordinary construction would either have burned up in the air or dropped plummet-like to the bottom of the sea under conditions similar to those met by Courtney.

Courtney and his three companions, E. B. Hosmer, wealthy Canadian backer of the flight, Fred Pierce, mechanic, and E. W. Gilmour, radio operator, are now aboard the liner Minnewaska which will arrive in New York Monday morning.

Plane Is Abandoned

Captain Claret of the Minnewaska today sent a radio message to the Central News in which he described the rescue of Courtney.

"We diverged 341 miles from our true course to effect the rescue," the message stated. "We found the machine riding easily on the gentle swell. The engine room of the plane was completely burned out and the radio batteries were exhausted.

"We were forced to alter our course three times before sighting the plane from a distance of nine miles. As we approached nearer we lowered a boat and picked up the fliers.

"We found it impracticable to attempt to save the plane. Night was falling and the plane's owners consented to abandon the plane. The rescue was aided by ideal weather conditions and extremely good visibility."

Hoover had his speech completed today and gave out copies in confidence to the newspapermen assigned to him. They were under a pledge not to reveal its contents before he begins speaking next Saturday afternoon. The prepared program fixed the time of the address at 4 o'clock. The speech will run more than 5,000 words and Hoover expects to complete it within the 40 minutes assigned to him on the radio.

The candidate spent this morning quietly at his home, free from callers and attempting to catch up on the correspondence that piled up during his fishing trip to the north woods. He was to leave his home late this afternoon for a motor ride to the Bohemian club's frolic tonight at Bohemian Grove, 75 miles north of San Francisco. He will remain at the camp overnight. Associate Supreme Court Judge Harlan F. Stone, Secretary of War Dwight Davis and Assistant Attorney General William J. Donovan will attend along with Hoover.

Vare's Condition Somewhat Better

Doctor Says Senator-Elect Is Slightly Improved Today, Spends Good Night

SUFFERED RELAPSE LATE ON FRIDAY

(International News Service)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 4.—The condition of Senator-elect William S. Vare, 60, of Philadelphia, was somewhat improved early today, according to his personal physician, Dr. Ellwood Kirby, of Philadelphia. Vare stricken earlier in the week by a paralytic stroke, had suffered an alarming relapse late yesterday when he was unconscious.

A bulletin issued shortly after midnight stated that the patient was resting comfortably and felt better than at any time since he was stricken, but that he is a very sick man and by no means out of danger.

"I feared for a few minutes late yesterday that it was all over," Dr. Kirby said. "But later he was completely conscious and even inclined to joke a little."

The Senator-elect's $325,000 home in Chelsea is crowded with visitors. Among them today were Mayor Harry A. Mackay and and other Philadelphia political celebrities.

Afternoon Program

Shortly after two o'clock the speaking program began. David Kyle, Pomona master, welcomed Mr. Rentz, the "Hints and Dints" man to the platform who in turn gave the address of welcome to the grangers to Lawrence county and New Castle. In this address he made special mention among Lawrence county statistics he presented that the value of agricultural products in the county is $3,552,709 and the live stock represents an investment of $2,686,450.

E. B. Dorsett, the Pennsylvania state master addressed the gathering briefly. He expressed his hope that this picnic of the four counties would become an annual affair. Following grange announcements he stated that he wanted every farmer to go to the polls this presidential election. He said that the constitution was at stake and that no man should ever come to the presidency who would endanger the constitution.

Secretary Jordan, who was scheduled to speak at the evening meeting spoke at this point for a few moments on the present tariff question. He said that he had not favored the McNary-Hangen bill for farm relief but that he desired an equitable tariff for all.

National Grange Master Speaks

The main address of the afternoon was given by Louis J. Taber, national grange master, of Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Taber outlined the grange program of farm relief which has been presented to Mr. Hoover. The grange, stated Mr. Taber, does not want irrigation and reclamation of the now useless farm lands. There is not the demand for it now. He stated further that it was but the desire of the corporations to sell the materials needed for the huge dam that such reclamation demands. "If the farmers are not getting their share, its their own fault," said the national master, "brains and organization have made big business and power and that's what the grange must do for the farmer."

Concerning the picnic, Mr. Taber stated that it was the largest and best grange gathering that he had witnessed thus far in the year in Pennsylvania, and that it was the largest in the country this year.

Following the speaking program a band concert was given by the Slippery Rock band. Incidental music during the program was furnished by the Winfield grange orchestra of Butler county. A special selection, "The Beautiful Hills," a new grange song, was sung by Mrs. Reed Welch of the Washington Grange.

The amusements of the afternoon consisted of a ball game between two picked teams of the grangers. Horseshoe games were in evidence in every nook of the large orchard. Dashes for men and women and races for the little folks led up to the ball throwing contest for women.

Evening Program

About six o'clock many of the local grangers returned home to their work and the lapse between the afternoon and evening sessions found supper in the grove awaiting everyone. A social hour followed and the evening program began at eight. Secretary Jordan again addressed the gathering on farming and what could be done by the farmer in legislation. He explained to the grangers what the equitable tariff meant to the sale of their products, stating that he believed in a tariff, if it was a tariff for all.

H. G. Eisaman, state grange lecturer, then spoke to the grange members of problems that are confronting the grange and the possible remedy for them. He expressed his hope that the grange program of relief as mentioned by the other speakers would be given serious thought by the farmers and that they would avail themselves of the opportunity of the ballot in the coming election.

Following the close of the day's speaking program, a meeting of the four Pomona master was held. It will be decided at the December meeting where the picnic next year will be held as they are going to make it an annual affair.

The committee in charge of the success of the grange picnic consisted of the four county Pomona masters; Davis Kyle, Lawrence B. S. Miller, Butler, J. P. Hart, Mercer and David Douglas of Beaver county.

Tie-up Threatens At New School Near Princeton

Controversy Over Roofing Of Building; Building Trades Council Factor

A tie-up is threatened at the new consolidated school building in Slippery Rock township, it was learned today, because of the stand taken by the Building Trades Council of this city relative to the putting on of the roof of the building. It appears that the successful contractor for the roof, who is from Ellwood City, runs open shop, there being no roofers union in that city.

When the question was first broached, this contractor offered to employ union labor for this job, but the demand was made that the roofers of Ellwood City be organized. No agreement was effected along these lines and finally the roof was put on by the contractor with his open shop force of men.

Now, it is said, that the Building Trades Council here, is demanding that the roof be taken off and then put on by union labor. This those in charge of the building decline to do and the threat is made to take off the other union workmen from the job.

McKibben Enters Damage Claim

Asks For Statement By Graham Pierce As To Earnings At Cascade Concession

Notice of suit and statement of claim for damages asked were filed today in the office of the prothonotary by E. Don McKibben in his suit against Graham Pierce.

The statement of claim recites that the plaintiff, Mr. McKibben did in December 1925 at the request of the defendant, Mr. Pierce, secure from the Pennsylvania Ohio Electric company, which concern operates Cascade Park, a lease for the dance pavilion refreshment concession with the understanding that the concession was to be the joint property of himself and Pierce, they to be equal partners.

It is claimed that when it became necessary to stock the concession, that owing to the large amount of money involved and required to stock the same, that there was a paper written up and signed by them showing that they were partners.

It is claimed that the place was operated by Pierce for two summers and that considerable was made in the way of profits, but that Pierce has refused ever since to make a statement concerning the affairs of the concession, with the result that Mr. McKibben does not know what amount he should claim. He asks that Pierce be required to make such a statement, so that the amount owing him in profits from the partnership may become known to him.

McKibben claims there is a large sum due with interest from October 1, 1926 for the summer season of that year and also a large sum due him with interest from October 1, 1927 for the summer season of that year.

Summons in the suit has been accepted by counsel for Pierce.

A DESERVED SETBACK

COLLEGE professors, artists, statesmen, poets, doctors, lawyers and virtually everybody else but successful stock market players, movie stars and other easy money people are extracting a grain of comfort out of the financial statistics covering the latest "battle of the century." They have long been wondering why pugilists are paid so extravagantly.

The Dempsey-Carpentier fight attracted 90,000 cash customers and had a gate of $1,625,590. The Dempsey-Firpo bout found as many willing to pay for the show but the cash returns dropped to $1,082,590. The first Dempsey-Tunney go found 130,000 people present and $2,000,000 turned in at the box-office. The second engagement of these two fighters was fought before 145,000 people who paid $2,658,660 for the privilege. That seems to have been the high-water mark. The Tunney-Heeney match was witnessed by only 43,191 fans and the gross receipts were only $691,014.50. The promoter and his backers lost $150,000.

This would seem to indicate that the day of big money for fighters and promoters is over. Champions of the prize ring in the future may not make a million in a single bout after taking off a year or two without doing a lick of work useful or otherwise.

If there is a moral in this latest scrap it is that prices should be brought down. If boxing is to become a popular sport, it should have popular prices. It is ridiculous to pay an athlete a half million dollars for a half hour's work and to have another group of men take a corresponding profit for promotion.

TIME THE HEALER

DURING the week of September 16 the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held in Denver, bringing together once again in happy reunion the "boys in blue." Though bent with age, these heroes of sixty odd years ago will tramp the streets of Denver in proud procession.

The nation derives a great deal of satisfaction out of the fact that it has been many years since this encampment has been marred by the waving of the bloody shirt. It is to the undying credit of the venerable veterans of the northern army that they have done most in erasing the old scars and stamping out the destructive and foolish sectionalism engendered by the Civil War.

The unveiling of a monument to a Civil War hero inspired a discussion of this sectional hatred by President Coolidge a few days ago. He blames it for retarding the national progress. There are still some who should heed his words:

"The time has long since passed when to hold or express such hostile sentiments should ever be permitted to work out to the advantage of anyone. Those who resort to them should find that their standing in the public confidence is thereby seriously impaired."

Americans on both sides of the Mason and Dixon line are not proud of the fact that for many years the bitterness, hatred and sectional animosities left in the wake of the Civil War were stimulated and kept alive for the political advantage of the unscrupulous.

EXPERIENCE

THE world has ceased to laugh when Henry Ford opens his mouth. It has forgotten his peace ship and his brave announcement that "history is bunk." The automobile wizard is proof of the truth of his words that if "you take all the experience and judgment of men over 50 out of the world there wouldn't be enough left to run it."

His public statement on the occasion of his 65th birthday anniversary might serve as the creed of American business.

"The real profits of this or any other successful company are increased experience, better methods, more skilled workmen, more highly developed engineering brains. Those are the best profits we gained from the 15,000,000 Model T Fords—money is not the best profit."

Many American business enterprises are living up to that creed. They are making money, but their greatest satisfaction is derived from the public service they render and their achievements in engineering and production.

Henry Ford is one of innumerable Americans who believe and prove by their own lives that a man's best work may come after he is fifty and even after he is sixty. There are many such men who can work longer and accomplish more than the hustling youngsters of business. The Detroit manufacturer boasts that he will do more in the next five years than he did the last twenty, and he probably will.

The first essential for becoming a young intellectual is an allowance from dad.

During the war President Wilson had to call on quite a few Republicans for assistance and the one who gave much help was Mr. Hoover, Republican. Another Republican, Charley Schwab, was called on to build ships because he did not have any and those in charge could not build them. They had to make Schwab quit building ships because he filled all the oceans with them and no more oceans could be built because the Dems had spent all the money everybody had.

TODAY'S STORYETTE

The movie director was stumped. The room had enough pennants and there were signs of assorted sizes with a few pictures of actresses. He saw the football picture and campus posters that he had ordered the props to put up. Yes, there was the clock that had stopped, and the room had been decorated by throwing the things carelessly into their places. But still—

"Jim, you went to college," he said, turning to an assistant. "Just what is the matter with it?"

"Well, sometimes we studied—"

"Oh, yes. Hey, Bill, bring a book."

A brawny Irishman leaned over the big glass case in the chemist's shop and asked: "Wud ye plaize give me somethin' to kill moths?" and promptly was supplied with a packet of camphor balls.

He soon returned to the store red with anger. "Arre ye the monkey faced piece that sowld me these balls?" shouted the enraged one. "Just you come home with me an' if you can hit a single moth with one of these little pellets, I'll spare ye the thrashing ye'll get otherwise to say nothin' of the lookin' glass and ornaments me and the misses broke."

Mr. Levine, noted flyer, who gave up a flight from Europe to this country with a lady who is known as the "Queen of Diamonds" punched a Paris editor on the jaw for making "Dirty Cracks" at him. BALLAD OF THE THUMBERS

When wanderlust in olden days
Conquered the heart of the savage swain,
He struggled through a fearful maze
Of jungle growth, and with much pain
He made his way. He used no cane,
But bore a club and fought the throng
Of great fierce beasts that were his bane.
Today we thumb our way along.

In times when women wore their stays
The wanderers would cross the plain
In wagons, sheltered from the rays
Of hottest sun or from the rain.
That way was better in the main,
Though pioneers journeyed among
The savage, oxen stood the strain.
Today we thumb our way along.

But now we have our paved highways,
And distance mocks at us in vain.
We have no thought of long delays,
For cars are thick as seaside grain.
We hitching hikers don't complain,
We rove the country with a song
Which always ends with this refrain:
Today we thumb our way along.

Some, virtues of old times explain
And call our present ways far wrong—
Well, theirs the loss and ours the gain.
Today we thumb our way along.

ENDS EDITORIAL MERCY

The Provo (Utah) Herald announced editorially on its front page last week that all requests to "keep it out of the paper" would be ignored hereafter. The reason given was that papers in other cities whose correspondents live in Provo print stories of petty arrests, which the Herald sometimes omits out of pity for the victims, who usually plead that the publicity will cause them to lose their jobs or will "kill mother". Consequently, the Herald states, indignant readers who have read the items in Salt Lake City papers circulating in Provo call up the editorial room of the Herald and tell the editors what they think of them for omitting news, while other papers print it.

"Acting on the first impulse," the Herald's editorial reads, in part, "they (the readers) go to the telephone and tell the editorial department in no uncertain terms just what kind of spineless creatures they are for withholding legitimate news, and then notify the circulation department that they no longer want the paper delivered to their homes. They want the news, all the news, unpleasant as well as favorable."

An Inter-Language Wanted
Vare's Better Chance.
Dementia Americana.

By ARTHUR G. BRISBANE

We have with us now "bootleg money," worrying the financiers that nest in Wall street.

Bootleg money comes from the west to share the plunder when "call money" is jacked up to 7 or 8 per cent.

Financial bootleggers cut the price a little and take some of the cream from those milking the stock gamblers in the holy name of "conservative speculation." New York's Clearing House association held a special meeting Thursday to combat the evil.

At least a billion dollars have been sent to Wall Street from outside. You can't imagine how that hurt inside gougers that want the profits on usury for themselves.

Delegations of college men from different parts of the United States will record their voices on talking machines that scientists may study "American dialects."

The main thing is that all of them are understood from New York to San Francisco.

In Europe, traveling 3,000 miles from Oslo to the southeast, you would hear Norwegian, Swedish, Danish, German, Czecho-Slovakian, Hungarian, Rumanian, Bulgarian, Turkish, Greek and in Egypt, Arabic. Twelve different languages in a 3,000-mile trip, and not hear one-half the languages that Europe speaks.

Europe feels the needs of an "inter-language." The sensible thing would be to make that language English, that all waiters and clerks need, and nearly all educated Europeans know.

National pride prevents that. So why not use Latin, once the universal learned language, making it possible for Erasmus to speak to Henry the Eighth, for all learned men in Europe talk to each other through their books? Nothing could be more hideous than a made to order langage.

Senator Vare, most powerful politician in Pennsylvania, elected to the senate but not seated, is felled by a stroke of paralysis.

If he recovers, as doubtless he will, the senate in all probability will give him his seat. Such is human nature. Even Jim Reed of Missouri, relentless fighter, would find it hard to reject a man wtih one-half of his body paralyzed.

That shows how far we have progressed beyond the wolves. With them a wounded comrade is immediately eaten.

A Paris editor informs his readers that Gov. Smith speaks four languages. Many here did not know that.

But Republican members of New York's legislature know that Gov. Smith can speak at least one language plainly. The four languages that Gov. Smith is supposed by the French editor to speak are Irish, German, Yiddish and English.

He knows a few words of the first three and all of the fourth.

An old gentleman, aged 104, arrived from Lithuania two days ago to see this country. He said he didn't believe in "spending all your life in one place," so he only lived 104 years in Lithuania. He will change his mind if he tries certain brands on sale in this country.

Ancient manuscripts are supposed to show that King Herod, not Pilate, ordered the crucifixion of Jesus. Herod was bad enough without trying to make his record worse.

Crucifixion was distinctly a Roman punishment, as many Christian martyrs learned with sorrow.

It was never a Jewish punishment. Jewish law stoned the condemned criminal.

Jerusalem was ruled by a Roman governor, Pilate, at the time of the crucifixion, and the Roman punishment was adopted.

Dr. Crane's Editorial

CHURCH UNION

There is no doubt that, as far as its influence upon the outside world is concerned, the church would be better off were the various denominations united.

The problem, however, presents considerable practical difficulty. The Church is an institution. A cause is both held back and advanced by being connected with an institution.

The institution gives the advantage of momentum, but has the disadvantage of being opposed to any change.

The churches in Canada have gone ahead of the churches of other countries with respect to union. The United Church of Canada now includes all of the congregations of the Methodist church, practically all the Congregational churches and 83 per cent of the Presbyterian churches.

The effect has been to reduce the number of churches to one-half the number existing in June, 1925, and "strong and for the most part self-sustaining community churches" have been formed.

A report says: "The gain has been enormous. For one thing the overhead expenses have been usually cut in two; the minister has had a man's job; the musical of the Church has been greatly strengthened by a consolidation of the choirs, and in hundreds of cases the Mission Board has been entirely relieved of the necessity of paying two grants in a single community where none is now needed." In many cases there has also been a consolidation of boards, committees, theological colleges and missionary staffs. These consolidations have been attended by a "real union of spirit," and "a distinct deepening of spiritual life."

Of course the Canadian union has only been established for two years, but so far it has worked remarkably well.

It would seem that the advantages of union are too apparent, and should overrule the objections to it.

Most of the real opposition is that it throws many people out of jobs. But such an argument is certainly too sordid to allow serious consideration.

Churches are historic institutions, and each one of them has built up an institution and gathered traditions that are dear to the hearts of many. It is always difficult to transfer one's loyalties from a lesser to a higher group. It is hard to override the prejudices that oppose changing from family to national loyalty, just as there was objection on the part of many regarding the League of Nations as superior to the nation.

But progress is largely a matter of consolidation. We change with much difficulty from the family to the tribe, from the tribe to the nation, and we shall have further difficulty in changing from a nation to a supernation.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

REMARKABLE HENS

A man who was born and bred in New Castle now lives in California, and together with his wife, also a former New Castle girl, raises chickens.

This man has become very well acquainted with his flocks. In fact, so intimate has his association with them been that he carries on conversations with spry members of the Poultry Yard. He asserts that one hen had acquired an English vocabulary of 20 words. Another has assayed to sing and because he believes that she is the star performer in this line he has named her "Mary Garden". He gathers her up and after much persuasion she says, "cluck" and "peep" in several different keys. The friends of this imaginative citizen have told him many and oft times that he is crazy, but he has stuck to his story. Now comes the denouement.

Dr. Schmidt, who is an authority on birds of all kinds, writes in the Literary Digest for May 26th last:

"It is very amazing, however, to find that certain birds not naturally gifted with powers of song are able to utter, or 'sing' single notes, a fact which is not obvious from their biology."

"I refer to our domestic poultry. I must admit, to begin, that my many years of experience along these lines give positive evidence only of the unfitness, ordinarily, of roosters for such experiments. On the other hand, I possess three elderly hens who are able to "sing" three notes, g, a and b in the middle of the third treble. I think I may claim this capacity on their part as a sort of musicality."

I have been one of the "Doubting Thomases" and to me as well as to the other incredulous ones, he has mailed marked copies of Dr. Schmidt's observations.

It is odd, nevertheless, to observe that Dr. Schmidt's "elderly hens" three notes spell "gab". There are other ladies who "gab" not only in the "middle third of the treble", but all over the "treble".

Mother!
May we have costumes for a show?
You're going somewhere. May we go?

"Mother!"
She hears it when she tries to nap:

She'd ache to hear that baby say:

COAL MINING PROBLEM

A call for real statesmanship to meet the crisis in the coal-mining industry has come as a result of the abandonment of the long fought-for Jacksonville scale by the United Mine Workers. It is agreed that, under existing conditions, the scale was too high, but the prospect of lack of uniformity in wages causes fear that chaos may bring new troubles for the industry generally.

"The miners have removed the last doubt that they are willing to cooperate," says the South Bend Tribune. The Detroit Free Press, while recognizing the "spirit of compromise among miners and operators which alone can bring ultimate success," warns that the action of the mine chiefs "is only a first step toward a solution of the soft-coal industry's problems." The Flint Daily Journal expresses the hope that the operators "will go half way to meet the miners and thus put the coal industry partially on its feet," and the Columbus Evening Dispatch declares that "It should not be necessary to argue that the miners should have the highest wages compatible with operating the mines at a fair rate of profit."

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch speaks of the tremendous difficulties ahead. "No head of the mine workers, whatever his genius, could solve the problem of the coal industry. Neither should any operator or operators' organization," in the opinion of the Post-Dispatch. "The problem of this basic industry calls for the best minds among the operators and the labor leaders, aided by the ablest technicians, all of them striving for a solution under the authority and with the earnest cooperation of the government."

"The utter lack of industrial statesmanship of a constructive character" is believed by the Springfield Republican to have been made conspicuous by recent experience, and that paper is convinced that "the decision to leave settlements to the several mining districts may now result in a shapeless economic chaos in the industry as a whole." The Baltimore Sun predicts that "if they attempt to force wages far down, the non-union mines may retaliate with cuts, and a chaotic state be brought about." This view is taken also by the St. Joseph News-Press.

Another factor in the coal problem is brought up by the Huntingdon Advertiser which, observes: "All groups in the lake cargo rate litigation have been brought to a realization that the real obstacles to the success of the Northern coal industry are not freight rates, but local economic disadvantages and an impossible absurb wage agreement. We say all groups, except the Interstate Commerce Commission, which is still laboring under

The Castleton Is Progressing

American Hotels Corporation Official Is Visitor At Local Hotel

LOCAL HOTEL HAS EXCELLENT OUTLOOK

The American Hotels Corporation is entirely satisfied with the progress of The Castleton, is the word brought to New Castle today by Albert J. Haas, technical supervisor of all the hotels in the American chain, who is spending the week-end in New Castle conferring with John L. Slack, manager of The Castleton.

"Of course," declares Mr. Haas, "the tourist season has been bad this year. But New Castle has been in a better position than most of the hotels in the chain. They have grossed more, and by letters which have been shown to me by Mr. Slack I am sure that they have pleased the public.

"You know, bad weather hits hotel men in two ways. First, there are not so many tourists on the road, so it cuts down his receipts. Then the price of fresh foodstuffs is sure to jump. If it rains too much the vegetables all have to be brought in from other sections of the country at an added expense.

"But nevertheless, General J. Leslie Kincaid is particularly pleased with the progress of The Castleton under Mr. Slack. Like even the most perfect things, there is room for improvements, and those improvements will be made. The hotel is here to please the citizens of New Castle and the traveling public. If we do not do this, then the management feels that it has failed miserably.

"The Castleton, it is felt throughout the chain, has a brilliant future."

Rain To Break Big Heat Wave

Weatherman Says Showers Will Bring Heat Relief Sometime Today

REPORTS HUMIDITY FAR ABOVE NORMAL

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 4.—Western Pennsylvania awaited the long overdue showers today to break the seige of sweltering weather which has been hanging over this section of the state, showers expected this afternoon should bring an end to the heat wave according to Weather Forecaster W. S. Brotzman here.

The thermometer hovered in the eighties here pactically all of yesterday, the weatherman said. The highest temperature recorded was 87. Unusually high humidity caused by Thursday's rains made the heat seem more intense according to Brotzman. He said the humidity was 23 per cent above normal.

Add Rain—?

Two Are Drowned

Thousands of persons over this section of the state sought swimming pools and the rivers for relief from the excessive heat.

DAILY EDITORIAL DIGEST

the delusion that a wider differential between West Virginia and Pennsylvania coal is essential to the rehabilitation of the Northern industry."

"For a time at least," the Washington Star believes, "coal will be mined at a price the operators are willing to pay, not at a price the union members believe is necessary to insure a fair standard of living. There is nothing permanent about such an arrangement," The Star insists. "From union labor's standpoint, it is a distinct step backward. It is artificial respiration to a sick and emaciated cause." The Columbus Ohio State Journal, reviewing conditions in its own State, maintains that "the operators have the upper hand now and apparently intend to use their advantage to the full. If this union is destroyed," continues the State Journal, "it is likely that in time another will be organized.The men need the protection of organization, just as their employers do, and the system is as fair for one side as the other."

"Greater production per man and therefore lower unit cost than prevails below the Ohio river," in the opinion of the Chicago Daily Tribune, "will never be achieved except through the willing cooperation of the miners themselves. Nothing will be gained by arousing the ill will of the workmen.*With consolidation, laboring-saving machinery and the natural advantages of nearness to great consuming markets, the mine operators of the Middle West may be able to produce coal at a price low enough to recapture the markets and at the same time pay wages commensurate with standards of living in this country."

"The day has passed," states the Newark Evening News, "when, in enlightened commonwealths, the worker, in or out of coal, could be exploited for the sole benefit of a master, personal or corporate. Operators who are persisting in their 'union busting' policy under conditions which should make for peace, are piling up material for a conflagration." The St. Paul Pioneer Press, however, views the miners' union as "no longer the powerful organization of a few years ago," and concludes that "the day of national strikes in the soft-coal industry has passed."

The need or reorganization in the industry is emphasized by the Chicago Daily News, Asheville Times, Kalamazoo Gazette and Indianapolis News. The Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader suggests: "The idea of allowing independent districts to arrange their own wage scale is an experiment, and whether it means progress or multiplying vicinity strikes remains to be seen."

A general improvement is expected to follow the abondonment of the scale by various papers, including the St. Louis Globe- Democrat, Jackson Citizen Patriot, Waterloo Tribune and Grand Rapids Press. The Kansas City Post hopes that "in the enforced period of inactivity during the wage dispute, trade conditions will not have been warped to a state precluding re-establishing along lines of mutual profit." The New York Sun, assailing the "fatal obstinacy" of the mine union, declares the present decision "might just as well have been made 16 months ago."

"A new epoch is hailed by the Illinois State Journal, with the prediction that this development" is bound to have more or less effect upon industrial relations between workers and employers in many other branches."

Weiner Roast At Gaston Park

Athletics Feature Activities At Various Grounds During Week

GETTING TENNIS COURTS READY

This week was an unusually full one for the playgrounds with three baseball games, a horseshoe pitching contest, a weiner roast and the usual Thursday afternoon swim at Ben Franklin. The Gaston girls were overwhelmed in a baseball game with West Side by 40-10. On Friday the latter also took McCleary into camp by a one-sided score. The Gaston boys were again defeated by Croton and thereby giving Croton the lead in the playground league. On Tuesday afternoon over 40 children attended a weiner roast at Gaston park furnishing their own weiners and roasting them over an open fire.

But in spite of a few burnt fingers and the consuming of a number of charred "dogs" the roast was thoroughly enjoyed. The two periods of swimming at the Ben Franklin pool was attended by 175 children most of whom were from Gaston and Franklin.

The West Side boys not to be outdone have an improvised pool of their own in a hollow near the playground. A tiny stream issuing from a spring was widened and deepened into a respectable sized swimmin' hole.

Clearing Brush Away.

Considerable space has been cleared of brush at Gaston Park by Mr. Phillips the caretaker. It has provided more room for the outfield and additional picnic space under the more desirable of the big trees. A tractor and three or four public-spirited citizens have fortified the banks of the errant stream that flows through the West Side playground. Huge boulders have been thrown up on the more susceptible sides of the stream and thereby lessening the danger of further washouts.

The tennis courts on Boyles field will be ready for play on next Wednesday. The surface of the courts would be termed excellent even by an expert and that speaks well for brand new courts. The surfaces of most courts are generally rounded into good shape only after years of constant use and care. The three-inch iron uprights have been painted and covered with suitable wire. The nets will be serviceable while the marking will be done with tapes and assuring reasonable permanency.

In the near future a display of handicraft materials made by the playground children will be placed on exhibition in one of the local store windows. Plans for this are now being worked out by Miss Mackey, the industrial supervisor.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND
BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN WEB

It was plain to be seen Bobolink was coming to an exciting point in the story. His tail quivered and his eyes shone like twin stars as he chirped out the tale of what he had seen that morning.

"The wee bird paid no attention to us—he seemed to be watching something. He had been perfectly quiet, but now his tiny tail began to quiver and hovering over him we saw a fierce face slowly rise over the top of a leaf at the furthest end of the bush. Following the face came a great, fat, squashy body. It was a spider and it was as large as the tiny bird that sat on the edge of its nest.

"Poor little birdling—it was frightened—that was why its tail shook so! And no wonder!

"Now the ugly spider was crawling swiftly across its web straight in the other's direction. The frightful creature had spied the little bird and was going to bite him—perhaps it would even go so far as to eat him for dinner.

"What a disgrace for a bird to be caught by a spider! We must do something to save a member of our own race. We would bite off the spider's head. There was no time to be lost!

"We need not have worried. Before we could drop upon our intended victim—and you all know it does not take a Bobolink long to do a thing, once he makes up his mind to do it—the little bird no larger than the spider—in less time than it takes to tell it—had risen into the air and dropped plumb upon the spider's back, and with one blow of his sharp, tiny beak had settled the ugly crawler's fate. Then the little bird cocked his little head upon one side, looked up at us and, winking one eye, spoke:

"'Well, friends, how is that for a morning's work? Do you know any Sparkle Tail who could have made a better job of it?'

"The whole thing had happened so quickly, that if it had not been for the lifeless body of the spider stretched there before us for proof we Bobolinks might almost have imagined that we had dreamed it."

Next—"Why Sparkle-Tail Chose Spider for a Neighbor."

"The SPIDER WAS CRAWLING STRAIGHT in the DIRECTION of the BIRD"

Tunnes (staggering to registrar): "I want to register twins, gentlemen."

Registrar: "But why do you say 'Gentlemen' when I am alone here?"

Tunnes: "Heavens! Then I had better go home and see if it is only one child, after all."—Lustige Kolner Zeitung, Cologne.

American Relay Team Is Winner In Olympic Race

United States Four-Man Relay Team Wins Olympic Race Handily

By HARRY R. FLORY
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Amsterdam, Aug. 4.—America's four-man relay team of Frank Wykoff, Jimmy Quinn, Charley Borah and Hank Russell, running in that order, won its heat rather impressively in the 400-meter relay race at the Olympic games today. Hungary, finishing second, didn't force the Americans to their best and suffered further by disqualification after the race. Switzerland being placed second. The Americans, evidently smarting under the series of defeats they have sustained in running races. Finished the distance in 41 1-5, almost nipping the Olympic record of 41 second flat.

Pennsylvania Farm Values Better Than In Other States Leader Of Grange Declares

Farm values are beginning to swing upward, and farm prices are better in Pennsylvania than in any other state, according to the statement of L. J. Taber, national grange master, yesterday.

The prices of farms in Pennsylvania, he said, did not soar as they did in other states. They remained in a more natural state and the result is that the slump is not so great as in other states and farm lands are bringing a better price. They are even in greater demand, he said.

Mr. Taber who is connected with a joint stock land bank with offices in various cities states that they have $14,000,000 in Pennsylvania farm lands at the present time. The bank has had more requests for farm lands in this state than in any other.

After travelling extensively in every state in the union Mr. Taber has seen for himself and knows the conditions that exist in other farm sections in different parts of the country. Unorganized farmers of these section are gathering together, he stated. There has been a greater grange growth this last year than ever before and more and more are coming into the organization. The farmer, he stated, will nexer get anything without organization.

Ezra Meeker To Cross Continent For Sixth Time

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Ezra Meeker, who blazed the Oregon trail in 1852, is going to cross the continent for the sixth and last time, in his 98th year.

A stooping, fragile little man, with a shaggy white beard, he divulged his plans this morning with all the enthusiasm of the boy of 21 who first journeyed forth under the canvas top of a prairie schooner 76 years ago.

"I have been over the old Oregon trail three times by ox team, once by automobile, once by airplane from Vancouver to Washington, D. C.," said the old man.

"This time I am going in a Ford automobile on which the Oregon Trail Memorial association has built a covered wagon top. I can travel, sleep and cook by electricity all the way to the Pacific coast."

Ralph Steen, 25-year-old University of Kansas student, is to be chauffeur. They will set forth Sunday.

Arrest Seven For Alleged Gambling

Today the city of New Castle is richer by some $120. Seven names were read out in police court this morning by Mayor William H. Gillespie. No one responded. The city wil keep the money.

Friday night at about ten o'clock, Officer Emery looked into the back window of a pool room at 303 South Jefferson street. There he reports he saw the proprietor, Alex Iodice, and six visitors playing cards. The officer went in. Eight dollars were on the table, which the men tried to stuff into their pockets as the officer entered.

But the officer made the men put the money back on the table. Then he reached for the phone and called the police patrol.

At the police station Iodice put up a $50 forfeit. The other six forfeited $10 each. Now the city has the money.

Foster's Weather Forecast

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—General precipitation of continent during first half of August was expected to be distributed as described for last half of July, falling mostly in eastern half of continent, increasing slightly in northwest and on central and north Pacific slope, averaging about to a little below normal for the continent as a whole, heaviest precipitation of month during period 8 to 12. Temperatures are expected to average above normal generally during first half of month with most heat occurring 1 to 10. Storm force will increase during August, resulting in greater than usual temperature extremes; during the average August, daily average temperature fluctuations are very small and are much greater in northern than in southern parts of North America. A noticeable feature of 1928 to date has been the absence of dangerous southern storms both in occurrence and in these forecasts.

A storm wave of mild force but of heat breeding character will cross continent during week centering on August 3, followed by a short period of lower temperatures centering on 8. A storm wave of severe intensity of force will cross continent during week centering on 10; this storm wave will be expected to cause greatest temperature extremes and heaviest precipitation of month but will not be expected to cause damaging low temperatures either during or following storm center; first half of August is expected to be unusually free from damaging frosts. During this storm period, conditions will again be favorable to the breeding of insects and will be the final period of this nature this season. Present reports are to the effect that rust spores are very scarce in spring wheat atmosphere; conditions have been ideal for rust breeding, but the spores were not there. An absence of rust spores will centainly mean a bumper Canadian wheat crop.

Grain prices continue their downward trend regardless of prospective world yields; some market reporters even state that short crops of Europe will not effect American prices. At the present time, Canada is the only wheat exporting country that has prospects of a bumper crop; Canada also has the greater part of old crop carryover. Within three years from date, this condition will be reversed and we will see bountiful yields in Europe and at the same time unusually small yields of North American grains. North America has grain for export even during the most adverse crop year. Should Russia get back to pre-war grain production before this expected reversal occurs, using present conditions as a basis, North America may have to pay Europe to transport what little grain Europe may need for a year or two. Present grain prices offer some profit to most U. S. farmers, even on high priced land; they offer good profits to the Canadian farmer; they will not yield a profit that will compensate American farmers and leave any balance to be applied to the losses of a poor crop season. That considerable number of farmers who are always forced to sell as fast as harvested are the ones to be pitied.

Hobby Day Here Brings Out Many Old And New Bits

ELLWOOD CITY, Aug. 4.—The first of its kind here, Hobby Day, at the Lincoln gymnasium, was a huge success yesterday afternoon. Local people donated various articles they had owned for years or other articles of which they were proud, that they created themselves. Miss Virginia Kerr had charge of the affair and Clifford Swick lent his artistic talents in the display designs.

Upon strolling through the exhibit one was immediately struck by the magnificance and abundance of beautiful Spanish shawls, draped to exhibit them at their best lustrous advantage; foreign dolls, loaned by Miss Marguerite Dambach; antique dishes by Mrs. Ed. Poole; spun glass of rare design, by Maurice Krause; art work by Lewis Nickum and one shawl that was reputed to be over 100 years old. There were lovely oil paintings and many other beautiful things too numerous to mention. The versatile talent displayed by the local people, however, was most edifying.

Enrollment In Public Schools Increasing Here

Pupils Are Now Admitted Twice Annually To Local Schools

ELLWOOD CITY, Aug. 4.—Supt. W. Ray Smith announced this morning that he expected at least an increase of 200 pupils enrolled in the schools, over the numbered entered last year, when school opens next month.

The surrounding vicinity entrants are uncertain, and authentic facts will not be available until later, when the applications begin to come in.

Supt. Smith states that the increase is not so large each fall of late on account of admitting pupils at midsemester also. This practice was started last year. Last September the increase was 300 over the former year.

The junior high school students from the eighth grade on, and the senior grades will occupy the Lincoln school beginning this fall. All grades under the eighth will be transferred to the Central building, which is being renovated this summer.

In the Central school they will have the same advantages, having the same instructors art and music. For the shop work and home economics, the seventh grade pupils will attend classes in the Lincoln building.

The reason that the senior high school students did not occupy the Lincoln building at its completion is that the parts particularly useful to high school studies were not completed at that time.

Boys Confess To Pilfering Local Stores

About Twenty Young Lads Hailed Before Burgess Evans On Pilfering Charges

Several Of The Boys Recommended To Reform School, Others Warned

ELLWOOD CITY, Aug. 4.—About 20 boys were arraigned in Squire Douds' office in a hearing before Burgess Evans and the squire regarding complaints of petty thefts which have been going on for some time in the local stores.

One after another the boys confessed to the robberies. One lad said he had taken the trunks to a bathing suit from the Ellwood News Company and sold them to a buddy for 10 cents. The buddy, it seemed, was not content with merely the trunks and expressed a desire for the balance, so his pal went jauntily back and "swiped" the shirt to the suit, the entire outfit netting him about 40 cents, so he said.

Chief Morrison, in discussing the sad plight of these boys, blames the parents to a certain extent.

Several of the boys were recommended to the reform school and others were released with a severe lecture from the squire and Burgess Evans.

Move Is Started To Meet Pledges Of Chest Teams

Benefit Tickets For Cathedral Help Meet Pledges Underwritten By Teams

A movement will be started immediately to make up the money that was underwritten by teams and divisions in the last Community Chest drive according to Mrs. Charles Johnson, director of the drive. This sum amounts to some $2,552.62.

Tickets have been printed and in cooperation with Herbert Pearrs of the Scottish-Rite cathedral an arrangement has been made whereby benefits from the pictures shown from August 13 to 18 will be turned over to the chest in an effort to remedy the present deficit.

Members of the teams and divisions met today at noon and decided to go on with the drive in selling these tickets. Members have been attempting to pay the money that they subscribed to make the drive go over the top and a portion of it has been raised but the near three thousand dollars is still to be paid.

It is hoped by the chest that townspeople will cooperate in the payment of this debt. The two shows which will be presented under the auspices of the chest are the best obtainable and not only will the buyers of tickets see a high class picture but will be helping the Community Chest greatly.

The ticket sale will start immediately.

Special Delivery For Parcels Post

New Service Is Created In Post Office Mail Handling Department

Postmaster Edwin W. Crawford announced this morning that under a new law enacted by the last congress, a new service was created in the postal division with reference particularly to the expeditious handling and delivery of parcel post.

Before the service went into effect recently, mailers sending matter under the "special handling" stamp did not expect the parcel to receive speedy delivery when it reached the post office to which it was sent first. Now this service is included with all "special handling" matter, and vice versa, all "special delivery" parcels likewise receive special handling while in transit. The new service continues under the name of special delivery.

It is provided in the new law that all classes of mail, except the first, namely, second, third and fourth class mail shall receive the same expeditious treatment as first class mail in transit, plus special delivery at the office of the addressee if it bears a "special" marking.

Everyone mailing special delivery matter should be careful to see that the words "special delivery" are marked on the parcel. This must be done by the sender. Merchants especially should always remember to mark their special matter to avoid delay in delivery.

With this combination of the former special handling and special delivery services, the rate for the combined service is made cheaper than the total cost of the two former services.

Life Is One Long Roast For Steffey, Here Yesterday

There is at least one man in this country whose life is just one long roast. That is Jack Steffey of Indiana, Pa., who was the official ox roaster at the grange picnic yesterday. Yesterday's ox roast made Mr. Steffey's 192nd roast of the kind and considering the scarcity of ox roasts that is quite a long record.

Mr. Steffey is an ex-chief of police of Indiana and started life as a butcher . Somehow or other he doesn't exactly know himself, he drifted into this unique trade of ox roasting. As he is practically without competition in his field he is called all over the United States on ox roasts. He has roasted steers and animals of every sort in nearly every state in the union. He has just returned from Iowa from a big roast that was held there.

Mr. Steffey says he likes his trade. It isn't hard work he said, it just takes a little patience and careful watching. In the roasting you know one must be careful or too much or too little roasting will make the meat wrong as far as the palate is concerned.

It takes care and constant watching said Steffey further, a fellow must keep his eye on the roast from beginning until the meat is completed.

Steffey does his ox roasting in a little brick house about 10 feet long and five feet wide. Built on the top are metal strips that hold the heat in the oven.

Aged Veterans At Grange Picnic

Wampum Man Of 93 Years Is At Ox Roast Event On Friday

Without a doubt the oldest man at the grange picnic at the Boak farm yesterday was J. S. Munnel of Wampum. He is a Civil War veteran of the 134th Regiment. He is 93 years of age and will soon be 94. Along with Mr. Munnel was another Civil War cronie, J. A. Magee, 85, of Plaingrove.

The two old fellows sat throughout the entire day of the picnic, listening to the speeches and relating experiences of the war between bites of roasted ox.

Mr. Munnell went through the great battles of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville without a scratch although there were 13 bullet holes in his clothes and one through his hat.

J. A. Magee fought in seven different states during the war. With the 100th Regiment he fought in 27 important battles.

Both the veterans were feeling fine and apparently enjoying themselves all day long. They expressed their hope of being able to attend next year's gathering of the grangers.

SAYS BIRDS NIGHT HAWKS

Editor The News,
Dear Sir:—

In regard to Mr. Wolfe's "whip-poor-will and her little family, allow me to say that the birds flying over our city in the early evenings are not "whip-poor-wills" but nighthawks.

The resemblance of the latter bird to the whip-poor-will is close and they are commonly mistaken for whip-poor-wills. The whip-poor-will has no white on the wings and its tail feathers are pointed or dove-shaped, not forked like those of the hawk.

The whip-poor-will is also not white throated. In shape, size and general appearance, the two birds are very much alike.

Yours respectfully,
W. H. LOCKE.

Glimpses Of Nature

By OWEN PENFIELD FOX

The sun of a beautiful day was fading and throwing long shadows across a sagging rail fence, and across the distant hills studded with big pine which thrust their long branches up to the heavens that ray. As my eyes drank in this beauty, my friend who lives in this wooded spot asked me what was my greatest thrill I found in my quest of nature, and I answered him in this way:

Every doy I go into the woods I see something new that interests me. The discovery of new species of bird, the chattering gray squirrel as he circles a great oak, the quick jump of a rabbit as he leaves the bush. I have watched the porcupine as he shambles along, the quail making a rattling sound as he goes his way. I have seen many wild things which dwell in the outdoors, but my biggest thrill was when I watched a mountain goat as he stood on a rocky ledge high above, and at some slight forest sound leaped from crag to crag, his feet gripping where no man would dare go, and finally lost to sight.

My friend of the big woods and I watched the shadows of night creep over us, then the coming of the stars. As I went down the lane next morning, enjoying the cool air, there zoomed out across my path a cock grouse. What a picture he did make as he cut the mist of the early morn with his powerful wings and tail spread like a big fan. I watched him sail high, then falling sideways into the thicket and was gone.

Fowler T. Booth of this city, who has a country place, invites me to come and see the wild life near his home. And he relates to me the thrill he got as he watched a brood of 14 snipe as they strutted across the road.

Hickman Counsel Prepares Appeal To Supreme Court

All Hope Of Victory In California Courts Vanishes; Claim Conviction Illegal

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 4.—All hope of gaining victory in the courts of California having vanished attorneys for William Edward Hickman Friday launched preparations to carry to the United States supreme court their right to save the slayer of Marion Parkar from the noose.

On the heels of the California state supreme court's denial of a petition for a rehearing of Hickman's appeal came the announcement from Rickard Cantillion associate defense counsel here that an appeal from the murder conviction would be taken to the supreme court at Washington.

In a decision written by Chief Justice William Waste, the state's highest tribunal at San Francisco refused to grant a rehearing of the defense's appeal which the court had previously denied.

The appeal to the United States suprem court Cantillon declared will be based on the defense contention that Hickman's conviction under California's "insanity" statute was in violation of his rights as guaranteed by the federal constitution.

Post Cards From Europe

by William Ivy

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Sea captains—I mean captains of big ocean liners—are men who listen much and say little. It has always seemed to me a great pity.

Reflect that practically everybody in the public eye today is a frequent transatlantic passenger, and it is clear that the master of any one of the great Atlantic steamships could unfold an unbeatable story—if only he could or would talk. For things happen on ships that happen nowhere else, and it's a safe bet that few things happen without the captain's knowledge.

I have met many transatlantic captains, and some of them were talkative enough on most subjects. I never met one who was willing to talk about his own ship and the people who had travelled on it. Possibly it is a matter of professional etiquette—like the ethics of the medical and legal professions.

Take Sir James Charles, the Cunard captain who died so dramatically just as his last voyage of the "Aquitania" was ended. What man—or woman—among the world's notables has not voyaged under his command? Suppose Sir Charles had kept a diary of his transatlantic crossings—what a treasure of contemporary history it would be!

But who ever heard of a sea-captain keeping a diary!

Prominent men whose lives are closed to the public when ashore, are apt to open up when on board ship and reveal the innermost secrets of their natures. Some men who never take a holiday on dry land, always consider their sea trips as a period of rest and recreation.

Nobody but a liner's captain—or perhaps a liner's physician—gets the opportunity to record the intimate lives of so many great men during the span of a single life. But they never tell.

Why?

The Diary of a New Yorker

by CLARK KINNAIRD

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to New Castle News

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—They say that living in New York makes persons hard and heartless. Well—

There's an old man who dwells with a silver-haired wife and an ancient tabby in a toweringly imposing, but now cheap apartment house, in the hundreds, out in The Bronx. The home isn't anything like the place in upper York state they left behind when they were young and had children scrambling around their knees; but it's home.

The old man is a minor clerk in an unprogressive wholesale house situated 30 blocks, or three miles from his dwelling place. He goes to work at 7 a. m., and quits at 4 p. m. He hasn't asked a raise in 10 years, and he hasn't had one, so his salary doesn't go far as it used to. The boys, grown up and married, and the daughter, married and divorced, never send anything home except maybe at Christmas time, and they don't visit home much oftener.

The other afternoon the old man crumpled on a pavement a mile from home, crushing a rose and a box of candy under him. The interne who hurried from a hospital and bore him away in a clanging ambulance, diagnosed heat prostration and malnutrition. He learned that the old man had gone without lunch and used the money to buy candy, and had spent his car fare in buying a rose from a corner peddler. It was his wife's birthday.

Neighbors in the apartment house, none of whom knew the reserved old couple except possibly by sight, heard ofthe incident and gave a big surprise party for them when the old man was brought home from the hospital the following day. I'd like to report that the party made the old folks very happy, but it didn't. The old man was considerably hurt when proffered the purse the neighbors had made up for him, and proudly refused it;and his wife was upset because Carl and Joseph and Hannah (the children) hadn't responded to her telegrams informing them of their father's illness; and she kept audibly wishing they were present.

But the neighbors understood, and weren't offended by the old couple's seeming lack of appreciation. On succeeding days the women among them continued to pay attention to the needs of the old folks and began to call the old woman "Mother." One of them called up the old man's employer and made sure his job would be awaiting him when he returned.

And they say that living in New York makes persons hard and heartless.

The idea has gotten around that Wall street men are only interested in making money, and spending it on chorus girls. But one of the most important of them, Alfred L. Loomis, banker, spends all his spare time in his private laboratory, conducting experiments with sound waves that will set fire to a piece of wood, bore a hole through glass and kill a goldfish in its bowl. Physics are his recreation and his hobby. His amateur researches have won him the attention of university professors, and one of them, Robert W. Wood of Johns Hopkins, is joining him in some of his experiments.

There is another Wall Street figure, a "self-made man," who has a consuming ambition to be a musician. He gets out of patience with instructors, and so has abandoned them. He shuts himself up in a room at a cello, his favorite instrument. He talks lovingly to friends of his playing, but refuses to perform for them.

Chicago Chatter

BY IONE QUINBY

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to New Castle News.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—The newest racket in Chicago is the profiteering on parking space beneath Wacker drive and the north end of the Michigan avenue bridge. It has sent its first "gang war" victim to the County hospital. The racket is to pay a property owner in the under-viaduct district so much rent for enough space to park 50 or more automobiles and then charge motorists for the privilege of parking. Trouble comes when rival "profiteers" want the same bit of ground on which to work. Some of the "rival gangs" sent threats recently and later they beat up their victim.

On account of the rigid parking system in the Loop, there is a mad scramble to get parking space beneath available viaducts, and the Wacker drive and Michigan Loop parking places are the most popular in town. Underneath Wacker drive is called "The Catacombs" and it is a labyrinth of gloomy, cavern-like spaces. These places can be rented, but it is difficult to enforce rental rights, it seems.

"Say, that's a nifty looking little Packard you got there!" "Yeh, that's the one Marty Durkin took his honeymoon in, the last one he stole before they gave him 35 years in prison." And—"Where'd you get the runabout?" "Oh, that's the one Belva Gartner was supposed to kill the automobile salesman in." These are some of the comments heard about town after the annual sale of automobiles, which have been taken as evidence in murder trials, theft and other criminal cases. Reporters or persons with a drag often get these cars for next to nothing.

Some of the automobiles with shady history that have come into the state's hands are: The automobile for which Harvey Church killed two automobile salesmen; the automobile rented by Dicky Loeb and Nathan Leopold in which to kill little Bobby Franks; the automobile abandoned by notorious train robbers in South Chicago, and the machine used by Otto Malm when he shot the watchman of a knitting factory.

The automobile is one of the biggest agencies in modern crimes committed in big cities, and helps a large number of criminals to make their "get-away". On the other hand it is one of the greatest detective agencies, for often, persons in the vicinity note the license number of the automobile and through some quirk of memory or through suspicion that something's wrong, remember and report it. Many times the automobile is abandoned because of the license number. If it isn't a stolen machine it may lead to solving the crime.

Another good way to reduce is to offend all of your boy friends.

Ex-Policeman In Philadelphia Is Shot And Killed

Ex-Negro Officer Stages Gun Battle With Police And Is Shot To Death

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 4.—Henry Johnson, 35, negro ex-policeman, was shot to death today after he had barricaded himself in a house and for two hours had held at bay 100 policeman from every district downtown, a fire company and resisted a gas attack.

The phosgene gas, sent through a fire hose, drove him to a secret compartment where he was found and killed as he opened fire.

Despite the steady stream of fire only one policeman was injured. Patrolman William Addison was shot in the eye but physicians believe they will be able to save his sight. The shooting started when Johnson attempted to shoot Florence Gaffney, negress.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

Dreams Come True

By CLYDE WELDON

"DREAMING again," scoffed Miriam, casting a sharp, resentful look at her fiance. "Ye gods, Avery, I really believe you read fairy tales and skip rope in your spare moments, the way you rave about sunsets, and the flowers, and the birds, and nature in general. You're not a bit practical—never seem to be planning to get some where in the world; just dreaming and mooning all the time."

Miriam had been gazing longingly at some new styles in the show window of an expensive millinery shop, and had looked up to discover Avery looking with a faraway expression at the rose hued sunset that showed through the gaps of the tall buildings. "Isn't it gorgeous!" he had exclaimed.

Avery grinned good naturedly at her verbal chastisement. "Sure'd be a dull old world without dreams, Mi!"

"Yes," snapped Miriam, "but there's a limit even to dreams. That's just the trouble," continued Miriam reprovingly. "You'd get ahead faster in the office if you'd use a little more common sense and less imagination."

But Avery refused to be ruffled. Miriam, he thought, was really very pretty when she showed this spark of fire. The slight flush of her face and her snapping eyes heightened her brunette attractiveness.

It was strange they should be sweethearts. They actually had nothing in common. They had been going together for almost a year. And the spats had become more and more frequent. Miriam was secretary to the advertising manager of the Billings department store, and Avery, when he wasn't spinning fancies, wrote copy for an advertising agency.

But Avery's heart was not in advertising. He had a true passion for art. His great desire was to become a painter—to devote all his time to painting. And every leisure hour, when he wasn't entertaining Miriam, was utilized toward achieving that goal. Avery went to an art school three evenings a week. Frequently, before he rushed to work in the morning, he would put in an hour or so on a water color.

While Avery was an incurable dreamer, Miriam was just as intense as a materialist. There was a good reason why she price-tagged life, why she put a dollars-and-cents value on almost everything. Miriam had been an orphan and had had to fight her battle against life single-handedly. And now she was out for the good things of life, the things that only cash could buy; a town house and a country home, expensive clothes, motor cars, and entree to society entered into her notion of the ideal life.

So Miriam's disapproval of Avery grew. She had no desire to play the role of a sacrificing wife of an ambitious artist. And Avery just wouldn't listen to reason. If he'd just stick to advertising he might amount to something.

This was her frame of mind when Robert Mabry, a floor-walker in the store, strolled into the advertising office one day. He was a tall, somewhat distinguished-looking young man, with all the marks of a go-getter. He glanced toward Miriam and their eyes met and, for an instant, remained fastened on each other. Miriam felt a strange, but highly pleasant thrill, and quite abruptly the thought entered her mind that she had never had that feeling in the presence of Avery. The stranger was a go-getter. A few minutes later, after going through the formality of an introduction, he invited Miriam to dine with him. And Miriam accepted impulsively, replying with her heart, rather than her head.

In the restaurant Mabry assumed an imperious manner, ordering the head waiter to direct them to a secluded table. "A commanding personality, a man used to being obeyed when he orders," thought Miriam. Then, after they were seated, Mabry spoke of his business prospects and gave his philosophy of success. "Nowadays," he declared, with an air of authority, "you've not only got to watch yourself, but the other fellow, too. It's the age of two-fisted competition. The moment you start napping, the other fellow has your job." Miriam reacted with delight and admiration to his slightly pompous manner. "No, sir," continued Mabry, "the day-dreamer has no more chance than a snowball in hades in these days."

Mabry told of his hopes and aspirations and Miriam listened attentively, eagerly realizing that his idea of success and happiness matched perfectly with her's.

Miriam and Avery gradually drifted apart, and her engagements with Mabry became more and more frequent. Finally she saw no more of Avery. Their parting was friendly. Avery had finally come to realize he could not make Miriam happy as his wife. For him to throw over his artistic ideas and adopt Miriam's views of things would be fatal to both, he realized.

And it was only now he seemed to realize why he had been attracted to Miriam. It was her surface beauty; he had been intrigued by her clean-cut personality, her trig, well-formed figure, bewitchingly displayed in a blue serge suit, and her elf-like grace. She had been a symbol, just another vision in his store of fancies, and nothing more. It was well that they had parted. Doubtless Miriam would make a splendid wife for the right man.

Avery plunged into his art work with more ardor than ever. Though his progress was slow he was frequently heartened by bits of encouragement from his instructor. He plugged away at his advertising job and let nothing interfere in the few extra hours he had assigned for his art work.

Meanwhile, Robert Mabry led the courtship with his characteristic dash and speed. For Miriam it was a beautiful courtship. Her heart spoke and they were married in a surprisingly short time. It was a true love match. The first year was the usual roseate period of newly-weds. But as they entered upon the second year, the blunt realities—an augury of the future—became more clearly conceivable to Miriam and her husband. Robert had made substantial progress at the store; now he was a minor executive in the shipping department. But Miriam became frugal and frequently they had ugly words. She chided him for not pushing himself ahead faster. Then a little newcomer changed the aspect of things. The child was the medium through which a new sort of love—a spiritual adoration—developed between husband and wife.

Five years since the wedding day Miriam and Robert, contented, were ideal sweethearts. They had no town house, but they did have a country home—a little cottage within commuting distance, which they were paying for on the instalment plan. There was no motor car, and other luxuries they had dreamed of were missing. Miriam had no desire now to break into society. She had too much work at home.

Then Avery bobbed into her ken in the most thrilling manner. It happened on a drowsy Summer morning, while Miriam was scanning the paper to choose a movie for the Mabry's regular Sunday evening entertainment. As she turned the pages her eye suddenly caught the likeness of Avery. There he was, as life, looking out at her. Excitedly, she read the words under the picture. They told of the recognition Avery had won with one of his paintings at a New York art exhibition.

"A brilliant artist," she read. "Displays finished technique." "Fine feeling." "Applauded by Manhattan critics," and so on.

Miriam smiled wistfully. She mused: "Avery did make good. It's splendid! He deserves every bit of credit for his pluck and ambition." And then a mischievous twinkle came into her eyes.

"I'm going to write to Avery this minute. I'll ask him to send me a little water color. I'll tell him to write some little sentiment on the back—something suggestive of Auld Lang Syne."

For a moment Miriam stared vacantly out the window. She was actually day-dreaming! "Well," she sighed, "we're all happy now."

Bertie (meeting Jimmy at foot of stairs)—Dad has found out that you broke the dining-room window, and he is waiting to "swish" you good-morning!

A TOUCH OF THE SUN

By PHIL MOORE

"'Green and broad was every ten
And out of each a murmur went
'Til the breeze fell off at night.'"

PENELOPE sing-songed the words drowsily in time to the swaying of the hammock under the apple trees. She was tired after the year's work. Relaxation showed in every line of her thin, graceful body. A few weeks of this and she could snap into it again, carrying another year of work through to a successful conclusion.

The utter peace that enveloped her was disturbed by a persistent buzzing sound that presently developed into a well-defined clatter. A much-used car slowed and came to a stop in the driveway beside the hammock, which swung between trees at the edge of the lawn.

"Sir Launfal flashed forth in his unscarred mail," quoted Penelope languidly.

"Touch of the sun?" inquired the newcomer amiably. "I'm not an unscarred male by any manner of means."

He descended nimbly and came toward her, showing a pair of broad palms on each of which was a well-defined blister.

"And whether you could apply that name to the bus—"

Penelope squinted at a shaft of sunlight that shone full upon her head through a space between the boughs above. She swung a hand over the side of the hammock, fished up a black cotton umbrella and unfurled it.

"The broken rib under my shoulder—so," she explained. "And one arm through the crook in the handle—so—leaves my hands free for a book or paper."

She grinned and waved at a car full of waving tourists.

"The native exists mainly for the amusement of the Summer visitor," she commented whimsically. "Don't you know your High school literature, boy?"

"Oh, yes, I know. Bet I can say as much of it as you can. I've been up mowing the lawn in front of our house."

"Touch of the sun?" inquired Penelope solicitously. "Sorry I haven't another umbrella to offer. Since when was it 'our' house?"

"Ever since I bought it." Rodney said sturdily, "you know that's why I bought it."

Penelope squirmed uneasily.

"You ought to be seeking all climes for the Holy Grail," she complained, "instead of making such commonplace plans."

"If I'm not mistaken," he countered, "that guy found what he was looking for right at home. Don't be so difficult, Penny. It cuts me to the heart"—he gave an honest, boyish gulp—"to see you working so hard. It's because I love you. I want to take care of you."

"Hm—m," commented Penelope. "I am reminded of a maid we used to have in the days when the family fortunes permitted a maid. It has been related to me that she left us to marry a man who wanted to take care of her. They had 14 children and she took in washing to help out."

"Well," he said at last, "it boils down to this: 'A woman is only a woman,' etc. I must ask someone else."

Penny felt a twinge of—what was it?

"And say to Robin a kind word
And tell him not to fret," she caroled.
"There's many a better one than I
Would make him happy yet."

"I hope you are surer of the absolute rightness of your quotations than I am," he said with a twisted smile. He rose and stood before her, an attractive figure of youth in short-sleeved shirt and flannel trousers.

"Hang it, Penny," he said boyishly. "That was sheer bravado. There will never be any one like you. I love you and need you to help me make a home."

"Why didn't you say so?" she asked, sitting up briskly. "I'm crazy to try it on the love and need and help basis."

For one instant he stood looking at her dumbly. Then he firmly took the umbrella from her and sat down beside her. The umbrella canted toward the street, its broken wing drooping conveniently low.

"You must not think that plums grow on thistles," warned Penny, teasingly, though her heart was fluttering very much as girls' hearts have fluttered since time was.

Lower Ten

By JOELLA JOHNSON

IT was fortunate, Jane thought, that on this day, of all others, she was to visit her friend Olive. She could keep her secret no longer, and Olive was the only person in whom she dared confide.

Jane had been to the bank. There was enough money there at last. Soon, oh, very soon, she was going to California. Alone!

If you lived in Sodom you would understand why Jane thrilled so over that last word, alone. Sodom, in the lovely Connecticut valley, contained just 76 buildings. Of these, 60 were owned and occupied by Stones. Or if not Stones, then Barretts. Jane's name was Stone, and her mother had been a Barrett.

Uncles, aunts, cousins, ever since she was born she had been surrounded by them, watched, criticised, advised and chaperoned. And now dad, the old peach, had told her that she might go to California alone. Moreover, he had promised to keep her trip a secret.

In California, of course, there would be more relatives. There was no avoiding that. But, oh, the five, golden days between, days spent by herself!

Naturally, there would be strangers on the train. But that was different. Jane was exceedingly well brought up, and she knew just the right note to take with train acquaintances, just how and when to snub them. Hitherto she had had little use for her careful training. Relatives, alas, one cannot snub.

"Olive!" she fairly flung herself on her friend's neck. "I haven't dared tell you before. But I've been saving up money for perfect ages. And I'm going to California!"

"My dear! How marvelous!" Olive glowed in sympathy.

"What! Are you and your father going West?" The girls turned, startled, to face Olive's mother in the doorway.

"Not father and I. I'm going alone," replied Jane.

"Alone! You poor child! Let me see, when do you start?"

"I—I'm not quite sure," faltered Jane.

"But about what time?" persisted Mrs. Case.

"Well, about the first of October," confessed Jane reluctantly. It seemed hardly lucky to name a date so soon. "Please, Mrs. Case," she added, "I hope you won't tell anyone. Only dad knows."

Mrs. Case smiled. "I won't breathe it to a single relative," she promised sympathetically.

After Jane had gone, however, she gave the matter much deep thought.

"There must be someone going West about the first of October," she told Olive. "I'll hunt up somebody to keep poor little Jane company.

"But mother," protested Olive, "Jane prefers to go alone!"

Mrs. Case smiled absently, as at the vagaries of a child. "Nonsense. No one prefers to travel alone."

It was the first of September when Miss Fowne called up. Jane knew of Miss Fowne as a thin and bitter woman, a spinster, as she freely admitted, by the hand of fate.

"Mrs. Case tells me that you are going West," she began without preamble. "Isn't it lucky that I'm going, too? What day and what train?"

Jane felt herself grow pale. "It—it isn't quite decided yet," she faltered.

"Well, do make arrangements soon, won't you? I'll call again."

She did call again, not once, but many times. And each day Jane put her off with an evasive answer.

"Oh, Olive," she begged, "can't you persuade your mother to call her off? I won't go with that woman. It would take all the fun out of the trip."

Olive was hopeless. "Mother thinks that you don't realize how lonely you would be traveling alone."

"Well, I won't go with her," declared Jane. "I'll just lie about the day.

Olive looked more distressed than ever.

"I'm afraid it won't do any good," she confessed. "Mother thinks that she is doing you a favor, and she is going to all sorts of trouble to arrange it."

Jane set her lips. But in the end she did not have to lie for her father answered the telephone on that last day.

"Why, she plans to go on the 8:15 on Tuesday," she heard him say, and she breathed a sigh of relief. Thank goodness she hadn't mentioned her change of plans.

The 8:15 on Tuesday came and went, and Wednesday morning found Jane, bag and baggage, at the station. The train was in two sections, and Jane was just about to follow the porter to her appointed car when she heard a voice behind her.

"My car is No. 13 B, conductor. I'm looking for the young lady who has lower 10 next to mine. Have you seen her?"

There was not a moment to be lost. Even without the revealing words, Jane would have known that rasping voice. Clutching her bag from the hands of the astonished porter, Jane ducked back into the crowd.

What should she do?" Somehow Mrs. Case had thwarted her. But her reservations were bought and she could not afford to get others. A distressed voice broke in on her panicky mediations.

"But I asked especially for a lower berth. How can I get two children up into an upper berth? Are there no more to be had?" Impulsively Jane darted forward.

"I beg your pardon, but which section are you on?"

The harassed young woman turned, startled.

"Why—the second section."

"Praise be!" Jane pressed her tickets into the stranger's hand. "I much prefer the second myself. But they put me on the first. Will you change your upper for my lower?"

. . . . . .

"Dear Olive," wrote Jane from the West, "I had the most marvelous trip, met the loveliest people! And best of all, for five blissful days I didn't see, hear, or speak to a single person I knew!"

Olive didn't dare show this to her mother. Ever since the acid postcard had arrived from Miss Fowne, Mrs. Case's lips had tightened ominously at the mention of Jane's name.

"Never again," vowed Olive's mother, "will I go to so much trouble to help anybody out. Gratitude is a lost virtue!"

She—"The play isn't at all true to life. The wife continuously asks for money."

He—"Which is quite natural."

"But she gets it."

First Aid.

Stranger—Do you have to see a doctor before you get liquor in this town?

Native—No, afterward.

Beneath Western Stars

By PARKE WHITNEY

IT was night in Indian Bend. Beneath the Western stars, the town lay quiet and dark. There was no sound but the faint howling of wolves over the distant hills.

At midnight, however, a lone rider emerged from the shadows of the town and headed across the prairie. He rode madly, and the thudding of his horse's hoof-beats soon faded. On to the darkness of the hills he rode, and was seen no more.

Indian Bend apparently had not been disturbed by his departure; and if anyone knew he had gone, that person did not let it be known. The town was quiet for several hours longer, until the rose lights of the sunrise sparkled in the prairie grasses. Then thin blue smoke began to rise from the chimneys, and the town stirred to life.

One of those who wakened in Indian Bend that morning was Nancy Windham, and she arose feeling very stubborn indeed. Nancy had been in Canada only a month, but during that time she had fallen in love with Private Carew of the mounted police, and had been a source of worry to her aunt by her repeated threats to ride the Star Trail. Bob Carew would have been worried, too, had he thought Nancy was in earnest, but when she looked toward the hills and talked of the ghost warriors who came over the Star Trail to smoke the calumet, he though she was as adorable as a child who believed in fairies.

But Nancy had a real desire to ride the legendary trail, and saw no reason why anyone could not follow the path to the hills and the cool woodlands if one wished to do so.

She voiced her opinion again this morning.

"I've told you many times," said her aunt, "the hills are the abode of outlaws."

"How do you know there are any there now?" asked Nancy.

"I don't," said her aunt, "but I know that few men dare ride the Star Trail."

"Well, if few men dare to, I do!" cried Nancy, and rushing out of the house, she was on her horse and away before her aunt could recover enough breath to scream.

The frightened woman looked for someone on whom she could call for help, but seeing no one, she ran down the road to the police headquarters. Then she stopped abruptly, for in the room before her the officers were questioning a man.

Mrs. Windham turned to go out, but Private Carew saw her and came toward her.

"Good morning," he said. Can I help you "

He mistook the look of horror on her face.

"Don't be frightened he said. "He's a long way from here now."

"Who?" asked Mrs. Windham.

"Black Dawson. He escaped again last night, but he's way up the Star Trail by this time."

"Nancy has gone there!" cried the woman. "I came to tell you."

"No!" groaned the mountie. Then, "I'll get this one!" he cried, and turned into the room again.

Mrs. Windham went out and walked homeward, but hardly had she returned when she saw Private Carew go tearing across the prairie. As long as she could, she watched the scarlet coat of the rider; and although Dawson's escape terrified her, she was comforted by the thought that the mounted always get their men.

High up the Star Trail rode Private Carew, until, when the shadows grew longer, he was in the remote part of the hills. And there he found Nancy's horse by the side of the path.

A few trodden grasses showed where the girl had gone through the underbrush, and the officer followed this clue with haste and caution. He had penetrated the woods for some distance when he saw Nancy through the trees, lying on her face, apparently lifeless.

Carew caught his breath, and ran toward her; but as he drew near, she raised her head with a look of terror. When she saw him, she laid a finger on her lips, and then pointed downward.

She was lying on the edge of a ravine that dropped most unexpectedly into the depths of the forest. And at the bottom, beside a smudgy fire, sat Black Dawson, cooking a meal.

"Are you all right?" said Carew.

"Yes," said Nancy.

With a shout, Carew stood up in full view on the edge of the ravine. A bullet zinged by him, and his own gun replied. Then he ran down the steep hill, jumping over fallen logs, slipping on the pine needles, but still covering the wounded man at the bottom.

When Carew had bound Dawson and put him on his horse, he called again to Nancy: "All right?"

"Yes!" she replied.

"Meet me at the path!" shouted Carew, and began to lead the horse toward the end of the ravine.

Nancy walked slowly back to the trail and mounted her horse. As soon as they came, Carew jumped on his horse, and, holding the reins of the prisoner's, he bade the girl follow them.

For many a torturous mile Nancy rode behind them, and during that ride repented many times of her folly.

When they had left the Star Trail and were out on the prairie, Carew called to her and waited for her to ride alongside.

"Now we can talk," he said. "I did not dare to linger up there. Tell me what happened, dear."

"Will you forgive me?" asked Nancy.

"Of course I will. But you must never do so again."

"Oh, no!" cried Nancy, with a shudder. "I just went looking for ghost pipes—you know, the warriors leave them on the Star Trail—and then I saw him in the ravine. After that, I was too terrified to go away. But you came—"

"Nancy! Don't cry, dear! Everything is all right now, and I will never let you go. You see, I return with two captives."

Nancy smiled, and he leaned over and kissed her. And then, side by side, they rode into Indian Bend.

Two little girls were comparing notes.

"We had chicken four times last week," said one.

"How extravagant!" said the other.

"Oh, no," replied the first. "It was the same chicken."

The Book Worm

By HAZEL COURTNEY

IN the corner of the Henntington porch, enmeshed in a number of pillows and looking a trifle bored, sat Theodore Pinkerton, termed the "pedant" by the members of his set. Of course, they did not call him that to his face. Oh, no, Mary had just come across the word in a story and after consulting her dictionary had found it to mean a person who makes a vulgar show of learning. Ever since then Theodore had been called the "pedant."

Mary Henntington gazed across hall pityingly at the absurdly disgusted-looking individual who refused to take part in their gibberish conversation and joking. Perhaps they were silly, but why did he have to be so plagued prudish? What fun did he get out of life, being so superior to everybody and everything?

Humph! She shrugged and turned to the rest of her guests. If he didn't want to join them he didn't have to. She wouldn't have invited him if she hadn't thought he might feel slighted. And her mother was such a good friend of Mrs. Pinkerton's.

"Oh, I say," Theodore drawled, in utter desperation, "have any of you read that new book of Karl Damlich's, 'Konrad the Master?'"

Mary groaned inwardly. There he was, at it again! He knew perfectly well that none of them ever read any of that intellectual trash, and he wanted to give them another showdown. It was beginning to be an expected occurrence with him around.

Noting the pause, Theodore plunged into an explanation of the book, and before he had finished, Mary wanted to shout and tell him to write a dictionary instead of wasting his time here.

Then her eyes beheld a lightly-clad young woman crossing the lawn towards them. A certain carefree and independent manner convinced Mary as to her identity. Lois! She rushed to meet her friend and they stopped to converse beyond the hearing of the group.

"Oh, Lois, you've got to help us out, please. We've got an awful pest up there. He thinks he knows everything. He's a terror. Show him up, he doesn't know who you are."

Lois was a teacher in a neighboring town. Mary believed there was no other woman on earth as smart as Lois. Lois was not in the habit of showing off her learning, but long acquaintanceship had shown Mary that the teacher possessed a wonderful intellect.

After a little persuasion, Lois consented, with twinkling eyes, to help Mary out. When the two reached the porch Mary introduced Lois Waters as "a dear friend from out of town." Lois chatted gaily with the guests and Theodore shrugged his shoulders to think that a young woman would be so silly. He'd show her a thing or two!

"By the way, Miss Waters"—he shifted his position slightly—"we were just discussing Karl Damlich's new book, 'Konrad the Master.' I was wondering if you had read it."

Lois glanced at Mary, then turned to Theodore, a frown on her broad forehead and her lips pouted a little scornfully.

"Oh, yes," she admitted, "but I don't really think it worth a great amount of discussion, do you? I was terribly disappointed, for I really expected to read something interesting. I was not one bit impressed with the author's colloquialism, and I thought he sinned shamefully as regards redundancy. The book was nothing more than a compilation of very insubordinate little items in Russia's daily life, and was rather far-fetched, I think. Oh, I don't suppose commentary remarks will change the book, but that's my idea of the whole thing."

Theodore's eyes widened as he listened to the little thing in white. What an outburst! Where'd she ever learn that speech? Perhaps she was not so very dumb, at that.

"Have you read "The Confession," by the same author, Mr. Pinkerton?" Lois queried.

"I—er—No," he confessed. "Is that—er—recent?"

"Yes, just previous to this other book. I liked it much better. More human and realistic; not so much theory. Pedagogy is its main theme, and the most prominent character is a despot of the vilest nature. I'd really advise you to read it. It deals quite extensively with autocracy and and its results."

But Theodore was not to be thwarted so easily.

"Are you at all acquainted with the author's life, Miss Waters?" he ventured. He had read an article just yesterday, and surely a flip of a thing like her wasn't interested in a Russian author's biography. Here was an opportunity to tell her something!

"Oh, yes!" she exclaimed, unhesitatingly. "He was a sort of Beau Brummel, at that. There was quite an account of him in the 'Book Review' a month or so ago. Critics praise his phraseology and diction. However, they claim him guilty of tautology, do they not? Not that I ever noticed it particularly. A lot of his expression are quite obsolete today—not meaning to say that I'm a connoisseur when it comes to books, but I am really interested in Karl Damlich."

When all the guests had departed Mary hugged Lois and acted almost like a maniac.

"Oh, Lois, I'm so happy! I guess he's had enough for once and I hope it'll last a long time. I felt rather sorry for him at times when you quizzed the poor thing, but he deserved every bit of it!"

And the two girls, with arms entwined, went laughing into the house.

"It was a wet day, and as the pretty girl entered the crowded car a man rose to his feet.

"No, you must not give up your seat; I insist," said the young woman.

"You may insist as much as you like, miss," was the reply, "I'm getting out here!"

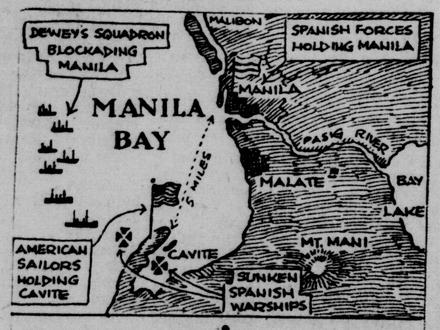
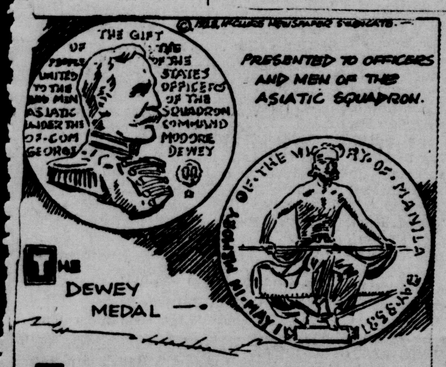
The Story Of Our War With Spain
Dewey Holds Manila Bay

THE DAY AFTER HIS VICTORY AT MANILA BAY, COMMODORE DEWEY SENT A STRONG FORCE OF BLUEJACKETS ASHORE TO BLOW UP THE GUNS IN THE CAPTURED SPANISH FORTS AT CAVITE. THE SAME DAY (MAY 2, 1898), THE FORTS AT THE ENTRANCE OF THE BAY OFFERED TO SURRENDER.



THE SPANIARDS CONTINUED TO HOLD MANILA. DEWEY COULD HAVE SHELLED THE ENEMY OUT OF THE CITY, BUT HE PREFERRED TO AWAIT THE ARRIVAL OF AMERICAN LAND FORCES TO CO-OPERATE WITH THE SQUADRON IN THE ATTACK. MEANWHILE, HE ESTABLISHED A RIGID BLOCKADE OF MANILA.



THE DEWEY MEDAL

THE AMERICAN PUBLIC ACCLAIMED DEWEY'S ACHIEVEMENT WITH WILD ENTHUSIASM. WITHOUT THE LOSS OF A MAN HE HAD BROKEN SPAIN'S HOLD IN THE FAR EAST. THE GALLANT DEWEY WAS AT ONCE RAISED TO THE RANK OF REAR-ADMIRAL AND LATER (1899) TO THAT OF ADMIRAL.

DAVIES AND ALLANO FINISH TRAINING

Flyweights To Box Here Monday Night

Hope To Eliminate Each Other As Contenders For Titles Held By Wolgast And Schwartz; Arrive Here Tomorrow; Belmont Who Beat Beatty To Box Vivio; Dugan Ready For Serko; Two Other Four Round Battles On Fistic Calendar.

By ED. FRITZ

MONDAY NIGHT at Jolly bowl, Willie Davies and Jose Allano will attempt to punch each other from the pugilistic horizon so that one of them can secure a bout with Midget Wolgast, state flyweight king and also a chance with Corporal Izzy Schwartz, champion of the world. They are scheduled to go ten rounds and according to the interest which is being displayed the bowl will be jammed to the top tier.

There is a reason for this, it being the fact that Allano and Davies are two of the best five flyweights in the world who are — Corporal Izzy Schwartz, Midget Wolgast, Frankie Genaro and themselves. Wolgast is the state king, Genaro is a former champion and a defeat for either Allano or Davies will rob them of prestige.

Allano has defeated Marty Gold who has also lost to Davies; Jose has milled twice with Wolgast; likewise Davies and there is not much to choose between them. In ruggedness Allano is superior to Davies but Willie is the more clever and a mistake on the part of either is apt to fetch a knockout as both can punch.

Floors Cavelli

Davies demonstrated that when he put the rugged Carl Cavelli down for a count of eight in the first round two weeks ago. Allano has knocked out a large percentage of his opponents and when the bell rings fans can expect a hot fight. Both are in the pink of condition and could step into the ring now if necessary.

Willie and Jose will arrive in New Castle Sunday morning. Davies will take a short walk to limber up his muscles after an auto ride from Charleroi, his home town. Allano will workout at the Jolly bowl as he will leave Philadelphia, Saturday night and will be fit for the battle of his life Monday night.

Jimmie Belmont, the machine gun type of fighter from McKeesport defeated Allen Beatty who fight Mickie Solomon, a few nights ago and will be ready for Young Vivio, the Pittsburgh printer. This semi-final of six rounds would be a main bout in any other city, owing to their class and rivalry.

Dugan Meets Serko

Mickie Dugan, Cleveland, the boy with the green tights and Monte Serko, McKeesport, who claims to have Frankie Porto on the run will meet in another six round bout and while Serko may be a little taller and have a longer reach Dugan will be his weight and make up for his lack of heighth in punch.

Good Four Rounders

Tony Canzoni, the boy who milled to two draws with Jackie Powers will go against Abie (K. O.) Witz of Canonsburg. Witz is reported to be a better boy than Powers and if he is Canzoni will have his work cut out. Dugan and Serko box at 123 and Canzoni and Witz meet at 115 pounds, the latter in a 4 round go.

The show will start with the Laughable Aces, Spike Henderson and Sandy Taylor, 142, doing their stuff. While they are good to look at from a humorous view both can fight and it would not be surprising should one of the Aces let a soporific fly though the bout is only scheduled for four rounds.

As Davies and Allano are only 115 pounders andthe type appeals to the feminine fan it is anticipated that the biggest crowd of women at the bowl will be the result. However, it is said that no boys or girls under 16 years of age will be admitted to the bowl as state law prohibits their attendance.

The bell will ring at nine o'clock sharp

Risko Is Seeking Heavyweight Title, Puts Up Big Money

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND Aug. 4.—Johnny Risko, Cleveland boxer, Friday laid claim to the heavyweight throne abdicated by Champion Gene Tunney.

In a letter to the New York boxing commission Risko cited his record of the last year in which he met many of the leading heavyweights. He also sent a $2,500 check as a guarantee of his willingness to meet any who challenge his claim to the championship.

JOIE RAY AND THE MARATHON — BY FEG MURRAY

Copyright, 1928, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Will Joie Ray, of Chicago, be the first American to win the Marathon race at the Olympic games since Johnny Hayes, a ribbon clerk in a New York department store, jogged across the line a winner in London in 1908? Now twenty years is a long time to wait for a Marathon victory, so your Uncle Sam is just about due, and in Joie W. Ray, "the Kankakee Flyer," he has one of the brighest prospects to capture the event that he has had for some time.

Clarence DeMar, who has the Boston Marathon half a dozen times, is considered by many as American's best Marathon runner, but Clarence is a hill-climber—an up-and-down runner. That is why he has had so much success in the Patriots Day race at Boston, and that is why he should not do so well on the flat Marathon course at Amsterdam as Joie Ray, who is a flat-runner first, last, and all the time.

At any rate, win or lose, Chesty Joie will add a lot of color to the race, already called the blue-ribbon event of the Olympic games. For Ray is one of those irrepressible persons who knows that he is good and doesn't hesitate to tell the world so. And the fact that Joie tried in 1920 in the 1,500 meters, in 1924 in the 3,000 meters cross-country, and now is entered in the 10,000 meters (which he won in the final Olympic tryouts in Boston) and the Marathon—the third he has ever run—makes his case all the more interesting. This will be Clarence DeMar's third Olympic Marathon, as he was among those present in Stockholm in 1912, and Paris in 1924.

The word "Marathon" has meant a test of speed and endurance ever since the brave Pheidippides raced the twenty-six miles back to Athens with the news of the Greek victory over the invading army of Darius in 490 B. C. Such names as Loued, the Attic farmer, who won the first of the modern Marathons in 1896 without any preliminary training; Felix Carvajal, the Cuban dish-washer, who was the joke and then the hero of the 1904 race; and Dorando, game little Italian who collapsed just as he was about to win the 1908 contest, are all indelibly written on the pages of sports history. But don't forget what Joie Ray said after winning the Long Beach Marathon, "When better Marathons are run, Joie Ray will run them."

No, Esmeralda, Alma Richards, the perennial competitor in track and field sports, is not related to Alma Mater.

Kauffman-Ogden Play For Title In Golf Tourney

Pittsburgher And Cleveland Man To Fight It Out For Public Links Crown

BOTH PLAYERS IN TOP FORM

By E. L. RAWLEY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

COBBS CREEK GOLF COURSE, PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 4. — Carl Kauffman, Pittsburgh stenographer, the defending champion, will play Phil Ogden, Cleveland's assistant street railways manager ,over this baffling course today for the National Public Links crown.

While Kauffman was downing Kendall Morrison, of St. Joseph, Mo., in the semi-final round yesterday two and one, Ogden defeated Nicholas D' Onofrio, of New York, two and one to win his way into the final.

In the morning rounds Kauffman had disposed of Earl McAleer of Washington by one upon the 18th hole. Morrison had defeated Frank Invernizzi, of Baltimore, in this round 7 and 6 and D' Onofrio vanquished Frank Brokl, Minneapolis favorite, 4 and 3 while Ogden trimmed Bernard Lucas, of California 6 and 4.

While the golfers were battling it out over the criss-crossed course Ganson Depew, local chairman of the United States Golf Association committee was called before Judge Raymond MacNeille of common pleas court to answer petitions for restraining injunctions sought by Robert Ball, Chicago, and Elmer Stout, Newark, negroes disqualified on Wednesday. Depew lost, Judge MacNeille handing down an injunction ordering the men reinstated and permitted to play in the tournament. Then the men withdrew from the tourney.

Crucial Series Starts Tomorrow At Polo Grounds

Cardinals Face Giants Starting Sunday In Important Series

YANKS- ATHLETICS BOTH DEFEATED

By LES CONKLIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—If the St. Louis Cardinals can subdue New York in their crucial series starting here tomorrow, many experts will be ready to concede the pennant to the Red Birds, for the Giants have demonstrated quite clearly in the past two weeks that they are the best of the other contenders.

While the Cardinals were bowling over the Phillies and Braves and getting an even break in Brooklyn, they fattened their batting average to .302, only three points below Pittsburgh. The Giants, meanwhile took three out of four from Pittsburgh, four out of six from Chicago and two straight from Cincinnati. They cinched second place and stayed within 6½ games of St. Louis by nosing out the Reds yesterday, 7 to 5, while small William Sherdel hurled the Cards to a 5 to 1 win over Boston.

Cubs Advance

The Cubs advanced to third place by outslugging Brooklyn, 8 to 5.They kayoed Jumbo Elliott in the third inning and scored seven runs.

In the American league Philadelphia's ten-game winning streak was snapped by Cleveland and the Red Sox shattered Chicago's six-game winning spurt. The Mackmen lost a chance to gain on the Yankees, who were whitewashed 8 to 0 by Sam Gray of the St. Louis Browns. Murders row hasn't dented the platter in 21 innings and the teams battering average has shrunk to .303. Waite Hoyt, the league's leading pitcher, was Gray's victim.

It was the first time since 1926 that

Mystery Surrounds Marriage Of Heeney

Thomas Heeney, Late Heavyweight Challenger Kayoed By "Dan Cupid."

May Be Offered Bout With Phil Scott In London Sometime Next Month

By SID MERCER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Thomas Heeney has no publicity purveyors, no challenge hurlers or defiance breathers yet in one way or another he manages to grab the headlines. Tunney retires and Heeney is back on the first page again, the hero of a romance. The New Zealander has been drifting toward matrimony for the last six months and he took the final plunge Thursday night.

Much mystery attended the "kayo" landed on Tom by Cupid. Modest in all his public contracts, Heeney shrank further from them in what he considers is strictly his own private business. He had been engaged to his present better half, formerly Miss Marion Dunn, for several months, wanted to sign the life contract some time ago but was persuaded to wait until after the big fight.

Are In Seclusion.

Tom and his bride are in seclusion and will take a short honeymoon out of the city while his plans for the next few months are formulating.

Heeney had intended to accompany his three brothers back to the old home in New Zealand for a visit to his parents whom he has not seen in four years, but an offer to box Phil Scott, English heavyweight champion, in London next month, may delay his trip to the other side of the world. The brothers leave New York in about ten days and sail from Vancouver on August 26. If the Scott negotiations fall through Tom and his bride will join the party and the Hard Rock will not return until late in the fall to enter the new elimination tournament.

Not long before he came to America early in 1927 Heeney substituted for Joe Beckett and lost a 20-round decision to Scott. For this he received something like $1,500. That was a fortune to him then.

Offered $50,000.

Now comes another London offer of $50,000 for a Heeney-Scott fight which has Heeney vastly interested. John Mortimer, who is conducting the negotiations from this end, received a cable from Sporting Life, a London publication, stating that the English promoters were ready to guarantee Heeney his price and bank it for him in advance. Mortimer is also asking a percentage arrangement and is awaiting a reply to this final proposition.

If it is accepted Heeney will sail for England at once, meet Scott the last week in September and then either continue his trip to New Zealand or return to New York for participation in the garden tournament.

Ritticisms

BY BILL RITT

Now that Dempsey is coming back there are two reasons Gene Tunney's retirement may not be permanent. Both of them are known as jack.

Dempsey has retired and come back so often that until he reads the evening papers each day he doesn't know how Tex Rickard has made up his mind.

But the champion retirer of them all was Kid Snooze, the pride of Sauerkraut Center. He retired after every fight.

The kid never walked out of a ring in his life. He could dive better than Johnny Weissmuller.

He never had more than two seconds in his corner. He always wanted to be sure there was plenty of room for the stretcher.

He once escaped the kayo in the first stanza and when the bell rang for the second round he though he was fighting a double-header.

The kid quit the game after every flop, but he was always back the following Friday because it was the only job in which he was paid for sleeping.

Doctor Denies Tunney Retired Due To Injury

Doctor Robert Shea, Denies Yarn That Tunney Injured His Head

GIMBEL REFUSES TO MAKE COMMENT

By DAVIS J. WALSH
Sports Editor International News Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Gene Tunney retired from the ring because he had all the money he wanted or needed and for no other reason, Dr. Robert Shea, the retired champion's personal physician, informed the writer today in characterizing as "sheer bunk" the story that Tunney's retirement was promped by an injury to his head, sustained before the second Dempsey fight. The story declared that Tunney on that occasion had become a temporary victim of amnesia; that this had served as a warning to him and that he stepped down because he feared a repetition might result in the condition becoming permanent.

"Somebody has been taken for a 'ride'," was the comment of Bernard Gimbel, merchant prince and the retired champion's closest of personal friends. His remark just about summed up the almost universal skepticism with which the story that purported to be the "real reason" for the retirement has been received by Tunney's intimates. The gentleman himself was and is out of town and could not be reached for a statement but those with whom he has lived and communed since winning the title in 1926 were unanimously of the opinion that there was "nothing to it."

Dr. Shea was more specific in his denial, since he felt that if anyone was to discuss Tunney's illnesses, he would be the man to do it.

Was With Tunney

"I was with Tunney in Speculator when this injury is alleged to have happened," the physician declared. "I had direct charge of his health, as I have had for the last ten years, and having examined him daily while in camp, I think I can speak with authority when I say that Tunney suffered no ill effect, then or since, from a blow or butt he may have sustained in the training ring or in regular contests. His health, in fact, has been just about perfect for the ten years I have had him under observation.

"I will not bother dealing with the obvious facts that no medical man could be in daily contact with a friend who was suffering from amnesia or going about in a daze, without the medical man becoming fully aware of the circumstances. The story says that Tunney confided the fact of his condition only in Eddie Eagan. Do you suppose that, if any injury was troubling him, he wouldn't come to the physician who has been both professional and personal advisor for years?

"Tunney isn't a secretive man. He is rather confiding with those he likes and trusts and I think I can claim to be one of those in question. Even if it were possible for him to conceal such a condition from me, and I'm here to say that this isn't possible, he would have consulted me about it some time in the twelve months interval since the thing is supposed to have happened.

Fighting Irishman of the Links

© 1928, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved

By QUIN HALL.

AFTER years of trying, the finest shotmaker in professional golf ranks is finally the U. S. open champion.

In one of the most dramatic finishes ever staged in any championship golf match, Johnny Farrell, the Quaker Ridge pro, won the title over Bobby Jones in a gruelling 36-hole play-off match after tying the Atlanta amateur for the crown in the U. S. open held recently in Chicago, at Olympia Fields. The "Fighting Irishman of the Links" not only won but he beat the largest field that ever teed off in an open championship match.

For winning the title Farrell received $500 in cash, a good healthy round cheer and a battle-scarred silver soup kettle which has been kicking around in the homes of various leading golfers for a number of years and which is an emblem of the highest honor in golf.

Just prior to the start of the big classic Farrell had won another title. In being chosen the best-dressed golfer in the game he was given another rousing cheer and a check for $1,500. On the face of things it would seem that it paid better dividends to be well dressed then well versed in the matter of putting the little white ball in the cup, but while the winning of the title pays small returns the chief source of revenue for the open champion comes after the title has been pocketed. This revenue accrues from testimonials — both blindfolded and otherwise—personal appearances on the vaudeville stage, in golf accessory shops and in exhibition matches.

Farrell, a snappy dresser and a panic with the flappers, should make an exceedingly popular champion.

That 36-hole play-off at Olympia Fields to decide the championship will go down in golfing history. In the first place it was the first time that the marathon route was used in a play-off as ties in the past had been decided over the 18-hole route. Then, too, every tense situation which is known in golfing circles occurred during that long grind and the closeness of the match can best be imagined by remembering that there was only one stroke difference in the play of Farrell and Jones over the 36-hole course—an eight-foot putt on the 36th green finally winning the match for the raven-haired Westchester County entry.

Just before the final shots on the last hole were played thunder rumbled in the west and it began to rain. The elements were taking a hand in the dramatic finish.

Eight feet intervened between Farrell and a championship! Jones' ball was two feet from the pin and a miss for Farrell would mean, at least, the playing of another hole—perhaps the loss of a title. With the rain slanting down Johnny huddled over his putter. A swing—a click—and the ball slid over the green, hesitated on the lip of the cup and dropped in. Jones was the first to congratulate his rival. "After playing the sort of golf you did it would have been a shame if you hadn't won," said the Atlanta master to the newest champion, and Bobby meant every word of it.

So the best professional shotmaker and the niftiest dresser in the game is now the U. S. open champion.

Farrell has youth, personality and color. These are big assets to any champion, and golfers everywhere won't grudge him his haymaking while the sun shines. They all hope the crop will be plenty big.

Big Ed Morris hurled the Red Sox to a 3 to 1 triumph over Chicago. Sam Jones of Washington held Detroit to five hits while the Nats pounded out a 9 to 3 win.

The paralyzed Phils were revived and sent on the field to be slaughtered by the Pirates, again, 14 to 6. Pie Traynor got five of Pittsburgh's nineteen hits.

SORDS POINTS

Tilden Stages Own Private "Comeback"

By JACK SORDS
Sports Cartoonist-Writer for Central Press and New Castle News

Big Bill Tilden, by virtue of his victory in the recent Davis cup matches over Rene Lacoste, the French ace, gained himself a position among the notables of the sport world. It is true that this victory was followed by a defeat in straight sets at the hands of Henri Cochet, but that failed to take with it any of the glory of the Lacoste triumph.

In turning back the French star, Tilden accomplished something rarely heard of in any line of sport—a comeback. Bill defeated the man who defeated him for his tennis laurels.

Tilden last defeated Lacoste in 1925. Since then he was beaten by him twice, in 1926 and 1927. The American's triumph this year even the count at two all.

Only one other case similar to Tilden's is outstanding in sport. That is the comeback of Stanley Ketchel. Ketchel lost his middleweight title when he was knocked out by Billy Papke, Sept. 8, 1908. But on Nov. 26, two months later, Stanley came back to knock out Papke in eleven rounds and regain the championship.

Many others have tried it, but failed. And so Tilden's performance against this great tennis rival stands out. He was considered by many to be on the down, but even though he has passed the peak of his career he clearly showed that he has quite a little tennis left in him.

A TREMENDOUS increase in Power

Not only does the Silver Anniversary Buick eclipse all previous ideals of motor car beauty, but it provides a thrilling increase of that vibrationless power which makes Buick's Valve-in-Head engine supreme among power-plants.

Vital engineering improvements—including increased bore and stroke, greater piston displacement, improved carburetion and a general development and refinement of the entire operating assembly—produce the highest degree of efficient, economical power ever developed by any automobile engine.

Moreover, drivers of the Silver Anniversary Buick reap the full benefits of this mighty new power with any grade of fuel. And these benefits extend to all phases of car performance.

Dazzling new acceleration—unrivaled flexibility—matchless hill climbing—and new top speeds far in excess of any driving need—all await you in the Silver Anniversary Buick.

The famous Buick Valve-in-Head six-cylinder engine was already the most powerful automobile engine of its size in the world. Now that leadership is greatly increased. Now the Buick power-plant reveals even greater superiority, as you will quickly discover when you take the wheel and drive.

THAT ACCOUNTS FOR SO MANY

Maybe we are wrong, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, but we always feel that the small boy who used to run a stick along a picket fence grew up to become a jazz musician.

There is to be no mud-slinging, they say, but the customary dust will be thrown in the eyes of the opposition. The Detroit Free Press.

"Harry, if I were to die, would you marry again?"

"That question is hardly fair, my dear."

"Why not?"

"Because if I were to say 'Yes' you wouldn't like it, and to say 'Never again' wouldn't sound nice."—London Tid-Bits.

"You never play any music now?"

"No, my neighbor lent me 20 marks and I had to give him the piano key as a pledge."—Gemutliche Sachse, Leipzig.

N. Y. STOCKS

By W. S. COUSINS
International News Service Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Stocks of the Chrysler-Dodge motor combination led a brilliant forward movement in prices at the beginning of trading in the stock market today. Wall Street heard that many traders and investors were switching from General Motors to Chrysler in anticipation of an enormous growth and expansion of the business of this "third largest" manufacturer of motor cars in this country, in addition to which the Chrysler insiders were confidently adding to the stockholdings.

Speculative enthusiasm was also stimulated by the favorable surveys of domestic business conditions issued at the week-end by Dun's Bradstreet's and a number of the prominent Wall Street banks.

Chrysler common and Dodge preference stocks were finally brought together in the speculative markets when both stocks sold above 88 for a new 2-point gain. Nash, studebaker, Packard and other popular motor shares forged ahead in active trading, reaching the highest price levels of the week.

Atlantic refining at its opening price of 187½ showed a poss of about 12 points from yesterday's high. The stock slumping on profit taking after the announcement of the intended four-for-one split up. But buying demand flowed in at the low prices of the day and a prompt recovery was in order, Marland, Sinclair and other of the independent oils sold around the level of Friday's close. General Motors, United States Steel and other speculative leaders showed the effect of profit-taking and a number of the specialties were also similarly sold.

American railroad and equipment stocks entered a little more actively into the speculative turnover in the second hour. Traders bought only the better grade of dividend-paying rails, favoring the issues on which there is the best prospect of dividend increases. The Texas Sulphur stocks forged ahead in this period and a few of the metal stocks sold higher, under the lead of International Nickel.

The market absorbed profit taking in excellent style in the final period and most of the active stocks finished the day with modest increases in prices. Stocks of the Mercantile companies were in good demand near the close, International Nickel, Warner Brothers, Marland Oil and other speculative leaders of the week were well bought. Atlantic Refining recovered about half of its early losses and sold around 161 in the final period. Motor stocks were slightly irregular at the close.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW YORK MARKET

By W. S. COUSINS
International News Service Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—In spite of the recent advance of the rediscount rate of the Reserve banks to five per cent brokers loans have shown an almost continuous expansion, the $60,000,000 reported in the Reserve board's statement this week more than counter-balanceing the declines of the past three weeks.

The New York Clearing House Committee, acting in response to the wishes of the Reserve bank authorities, took steps this week to curb the growing expansion of corporation loans in the Call market, which has generally been regarded as a menace to the authority of the banks in the money market as well as a drain on their earning capacities. The bankers increased the service charges for the placing and supervision of loans for the account of others than banks and bankers to half of one per cent of the principal sum involved, in place of the existing charge of five per cent of the actual interest received.

Attractive Depotits

In a five per cent Call market, the service fees to the banks are exactly doubled, rising from $280, to $500 on a unit of $100,000 on a yearly basis. A 7 per cent Call Loan market would give the banks $500, against $280, on the current basis, and a 4 per cent Call rate the same amount, against $200. On its own volition, the Clearing House committee increased the maximum interest rate paid by its member bank on corporation desposits by half of one per cent to one per cent, thereby endeavoring to make commercial depositing more attractive and profitable for corporation treasuries.

Whether or not these measures will bring about the desired stabilization of the collateral market remains to be seen, but at all events the stock market was irregular and unsettled this week with reactionary trends in important sections of the speculative list.

A return to the 8 per cent Call Loan rate in the closing days of July was not very reassuring for the stock market. This was partly the result and effect of the heavy calling of loans for the August settlement but the Reserve board's weekly statement showed an increase of $7,000,000 in brokers loans, reflecting the continued decline of funds for speculative purposes.

Market Shows Laxity

Under the lead of the Mercantile Motor and Steel stocks, the market rallied smartly on Monday and Tuesday. The oils then forged to the front, and the impetus extended to the Mercantile stocks in the first two sessions and was sufficient to carry prices of the favored shares to still higher price levels, simultaneously with the decline in the motors and industrials. This is what Wall Street calls a selective market, not inappropriate for this time of year.

Excellent reports of current and prospective business were submitted this week by the automobile, steel, railroad and oil industries, and the country's largest bank, in reviewing the outlook, remarked that the optimists had the better of the argument at this time.

The July automobile production broke all records for that month; the steel corporation surprised its boosters in net earnings reported for the second quarter of 1928. Railroad freight car loadings have again crossed the million-per-week; with oil industry was cheered by the posting of higher prices for crude and refined oils simultaneously with reports of higher increases in gasoline consumption and a decline in the volume of stocks oils.

The commodity markets were generally steady cotton regaining in the late sessions most of the losses sustained early in the week. Shorts in July corn were given a severe shaking in the Chicago grain market. Call money was easy at 7 per cent at the week-end.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 4.—Three thousand miners of the Woodward colliery of the Glen Alden Coal company, members of local union No. 699, have voted to support John Boylan, president of district No. 1, United Mine Workers of America.

The local voted to support the administration forces yesterday, rescinding its action of two weeks ago when the miners took action to support the insurgent movement, headed by Frank McGarry of Pittston.

New Route Given For Local Motorists Travelling North

People from New Castle and the south who expect to tour through the northern part of the state and into New York over the week-end, are given a new routing by Bernard N. Hanlon, secretary-manager of the New Castle Motor club.

In going to Erie, Conneaut Lake, Cambridge Springs or Buffalo, N. Y., states Mr. Hanlon, tourists should go to New Wilmington and then take the dirt road to Mercer. At Mercer they should take the concrete road to Greenville. This will cut out the detours at West Middlesex and most of the detour at Greenville.

It might be worse. There is no guild to select for patrons the naughtiest book of the month.

Fred Stone's Stage Career Is Believed Hanging In Balance

Doubt Whether Or Not Famous Stage Star Hurt In Plane Crash Can Dance Again

Both Legs Are Broken, Left Leg Is Broken In Two Places Say Physicians

(International News Service)

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 4.—Fred Stone's stage career hangs in the balance today whether he will ever be in physical condition to return to his profession is something the best surgeons available cannot determine for weeks to come according to pronouncement here today.

Both legs were broken when his airplane crash at Groton yesterday and his left leg was broken in two places. To unite them successfully will take at least six months, surgeons believe and there is a chance that even a longer time will be needed.

'No two cases are alike" one of the doctors said. "Cases of this sort have been known where patients have not been able to walk for a year. There is a wide variation in the matter of bone-knitting.

Stone was conscious when taken into the hospital after the accident but he lapsed into unconsciousness during the afternoon and night. When morning dawned he was feeling much better. "Condition favorable" was the laconic hospital report today.

STEAMER REPORTS . . . SIGHTING PLANE IN MID-ATLANTIC

northwest of the Azores and nearly one half across the Atlantic, figuring in a straight line from the continent to the American coast line.

Couldn't Tell Destination.

It was impossible to tell from the position of the Polish plane whether the Polish flyers were bearing for Canada or Bermuda. When they left Le Bourget Field, Paris, they said they planned to fly by way of Bermuda and stop there for fuel in the event it was necessary.

From the position of the biplane, as reported by the Aztec, it would appear that the flyers decided to fly north of the Azores instead of steering a course over the island. The airmen were about 1,200 miles at sea, flying south of the North Atlantic steamer lane but across the route of the steamships that ply into ports in the southern United States.

The indications were that the Polish flyers were jogging along as nonchalantly as when they hopped off saying they did not know where they were going but that they hoped to land in New York within 40 hours. The 40 hours will not be up until this evening, giving the Poles plenty of time to make good unless they run into storms or their machine develops mechanical trouble.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The Steamship Amakura sighted a biplane believed to be the Polish plane enroute from France to the United States at 5 o'clock this morning G. M. T. (Midnight Eastern Standard Time), according to wireless advices received late this afternoon.

Fog Along Coast.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Dense fogs hung over the Atlantic seaboard from Halifax to Nantucket Light today as the two Polish flyers, Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala, were believed to be nearing American water. Dr. James H. Kimball of the U. S. weather bureau announced that flying conditions between New York and Halifax were decidedly unfavorable owing to winds, rains and the fog.

Meanwhile plans were being actively arranged for the reception of the flyers upon their arrival in New York. Grover Whalen, chairman of the mayor's committee for reception of distinguished guests, said plans were not yet complete pending definite word of the flyers.

One Polish minister in Washington, Jan Ciechanowski, made a special trip here to be on hand when the airmen arrive and consulted with Polish Consul General Eugene Rogirodowski and Thadeus Marynowski, consul in New York.

Course Is Changed

PARIS, Aug. 4.—The Polish embassy informed International News Service this afternoon that a radiogram has been received from the steamship Port Hunter that the Polish trans-Atlantic flyers changed their course with the evident intention of taking a shorter route to America. The announcement follows: "A wireless from the Port Hunter is evidence that the flyers have completely changed their course, shortening their trans-ocean flight."

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Indications that the Polish trans-Atlantic flyers, Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala had lost their bearings and were sweeping in wide circles over mid-ocean in efforts to find their route were contained in a radiogram received this afternoon from the steamship Amakura.

The Amakura reported sighting the plane at five o'clock this morning, G. I. T., in the position of 46.20 north and 20.40 west.

An earlier report, received by wireless from the Norwegian steamer Aztec at 2:40 o'clock, Greenwich mean time, put the location of the Polish plane at 44.22 north and 24.08 west. Comparison of the two locations showed that the plane had traveled eastward instead of westward as it had lost approximately four degrees.

The position of the plane noted by the Amakura is not far from the location given by the Aztec earlier in the day. It was about 250 miles north by northwest of the Azores, almost in mid-Atlantic.

Seafaring men said that the aviators may have lost their course owing to the failure of their compass to work. However, the fact that they did not signal the ship nor even ask directions indicated that they were confident of finding their way.

Based upon news radioed from the Aztec, it was believed that the Poles were headed for Bermuda. The message from the Amakura that the aviators had headed north indicated that they might be making for Canada.

When sighted by the Amakura they were still approximately 15 hours flying time away from Newfoundland, based upon the presumption that they were traveling at about 100 miles an hour.

NEARLY 500,000,000 TONS OF COAL AVAILABLE IN LAWRENCE COUNTY

(From News Bureau State Capital)

HARRISBURG, Aug. 4.—Recoverable bituminous coal in Pennsylvania has been estimated at over forty-four billion tons a survey on coal resources by the State Geologist shows. This survey included twenty-five counties of Pennsylvania.

Since the coal resources of the state were first tapped 5,823,163,000 tons of bituminous coal have been removed from the earth. Nearly eight times that amount of soft coal reamains to be mined. There were 44,022,840,000 short tons of recoverable coal unmined the survey report said.

There is more than enough bituminous unmined in Greene county alone to more than equal the amount of soft coal taken from the mines of Pennsylvania in the twenty-five counties. The survey shows there are 6,276,251,000 tons of coal yet to be mined in that county alone.

Westmoreland county holds the lead among the counties in the amount of coal taken from within its borders. The production for that county has been 1,218,141,000 tons with 3,297,500,000 tons still recoverable.

The estimating work required more than a year and a half by attaches of the state geologist's office. It was begun in 1921 and the survey includes data up to an including 1926 Since that time much coal has been taken from the pits of the soft coal mines in Western Pennsylvania but not enough to materially lower the amount of bituminous coal still to be recovered.

Experts in arriving at their estimates did not consider seams of coal less than eighteen inches in thickness.

ABE MARTIN On Political Flopping

PROMINENT POLITICAL FLOPPERS.

If th' floppin' from one party t' another keeps up th' way it's startin' out th' p'litical realignments this campaign 'll be ten times greater'n th' free silver shakeup in '96. What few people still vote are makin' no secret o' ther convictions an' intentions. Tell Binkley, long a prominent Democrat an' cheerful giver, will not vote at all this fall an' has issued th' follern' statement along with his photergraph "Th' two big parties are so much alike that votin' no longer has a thrill. One party promises a vigorous enforcement o' th' Eighteenth amendment, an' th' other a rigid enforcement. Th' only difference between a Democrat an' a Republican when it comes t' th' liquor issue is simply this—one likes t' drink but he don't want anybuddy else t' drink, an' a Democrat wants t' set 'em up all around. I make my own liquor so I'm not interested in th' wet an' dry question which after all is the only issue involved in th' comin' election." "I don't care a d—m how Mr. Kite is goin' t' vote or how he's hooked up," declared Mrs. Joe Kite, t'day. Mrs. Kite has allus been an' ardent Watson woman, an' a great organizer. Continuin' she says: "I never could an' never hope t' associate any romance or sentiment with an' Indian, an' when my party brazenly puts an' Indian on th' tailend of a presidential ticket I'm through, an' when I'm through I'm through." Mr. Kite is an original Curtis man an' has been repeatedly spoken of fer census taker o' th' Virgin islands. Mr. Pony Mopps, who has been an' uncompromisin' Republican fer years, an' who has accepted favors from th' party in the' way o' haulin' mail, paintin' letter boxes an' in various other ways, 'll vote fer Al Smith. In a recent published statement, along with a photograph o' himself he says: "From now on I expect t' vote fer men instead o' platforms. I have only one fault t' find with Mr. Hoover an' that is he's too blamed quiet. He'd be great in case of a flood or a big snow storm, but I like lively, animated Presidents that talk an' gesticulate' an' do somethin' besides pose fer th' camera an' hold trophy cups, an' try on different kinds o' hats all th' time. I'm tired o' expressionless front view Presidents. I'm goin' t' vote fer Smith 'cause he appears t' me th' livelier man o' th' two." Mr. Art Smiley, high up in Democratic circles an' who has been in th' harness fer fifty years, an' never a minute in office, will cast his vote fer Hoover. His statement hain't been published as yit as his photergraph hain't quite ready. He's boltin' th' Houston platform on account o' th' farm relief plank an' says: "If a farmer hain't makin' enough money farmin' why don't he sell out on account o' failin' health an' go int' somethin' else. There's no strings t' him. Lots o' people hain't makin' money at what ther doin' Th' farmer should realize that his business is th' one an' only business in the' entire world a feller can't starve t' death at, an' most any farmer that ever moved t' town kin tell him that.

MANAGING MOMENTS.

Lincoln's Gettysburg address was written on the back of an envelope on the train. Lincoln managed his moments. One of the smartest men the writer ever knew in college was a fellow who used to work problems in analytic geometry by utilizing the moments between classes. In the few minutes between classes while the rest were talking and laughing and stretching in preparation for another session he sat quietly apart and did problems.

One of the teachers best remembered after the years is one who began teaching on the way from the classroom door to his desk. He kept at it until the bell rang.

NOT SMART TO BE SMART.

There are those who make neatly turned phrases for the sake of neatly turned phrases. There are men and women who gain a reputation for cleverness in conversation by constantly working at the job. They sacrifice anything and anybody for the sake of being thought smart and clever. No chance to make a smart remark a "wise crack" is overlooked. It may hurt somebody, be unjust, uncalled for and unkind. No matter to them if it is clever. No really big man is ever so unkind and thoughtless as that. Smart remarks are very often not worth the price.

THE LEGION.

Men who compose the American Legion once led the rest of America to a new place and a high place from which thousands of men and women got a new and larger view of duty. We encamped for a season on this high place but most of us came down later. These young men who led us there have not forgotten the gerat adventure in idealism even if the rest of us have. There is no organization in America that more deservingly commands our affection and support than the American Legion.

MUDDLE AND MYTH.

Don't depend on muddle or myth to get you somewhere. Things don't just happen for the better any more than they just happen for the worse. Things happen to us as the result of a cause. Let's be careful about supplying the cause. Some causes are not within our control. Most of them are. Merely to muddle through is the policy of a mental dead beat.
